Roosevelt Nominates Douglas for HighestCourt

Congress Leaders Of Both Parties Applaud Choice for Brandeis' Successor

By Robert C. Albright.

William Orville Douglas, who battled his way from newsboy and struggling student to a Yale professorship and top job on the Securities and Exchange Commission, yesterday received the richest prize of a life-success story.

The lank, tousled-hatred "Westerner from Connecticut" appeared due for quick confirmation as the youngest justice to sit on the Supreme Court since Joseph Story.

Nominated by President Roosevelt to succeed the venerable liberal, Louis D. Brandeis, the 40-year-old Douglas last night awaited action of a Senate Judiciary sub-committee.

Chairman Carl A. Hatch called a meeting of the group for this morning to determine "whether hearings are necessary." Despite Western disappointment at failure of the President to pick a candidate from that section, approval was taken for granted after Democrats, Republicans and Independents alike joined a chorus of praise.

"Excellent," said Senate Minority Leader McNary.

"A good appointment," said the two Senators from Connecticut.

"Delighted," said Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska.

"I could have wished the President had picked a man from the West, but Douglas is an able lawyer," said Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado.

No Opposition Observed

Douglas was appointed to the court "from Connecticut" though he was born in Minnesota; lived in Washington and California, received his law degree in New York and taught at Yale. Senator Norris had advised the President his colleagues did not regard Douglas as a Westerner.

Six Western Senators were named to the sub-committee of seven appointed immediately by Judiciary Chairman Ashurst to consider the nomination: Hatch, of New Mexico; King, of Utah; McCarran, of Nevada; Burke, of Nebraska, and O'Mahoney, of Wyoming (Democrats), and Borah (Republican), of Idaho. Another Republican favorable to the choice, Senator Danaher, of Connecticut, was added to the list.

Although King and Burke said they could have wished the President had named "a man like Judge Harold Stephens" and McCarran expressed keen disappointment that the West was not recognized, Hatch said he has heard "of no real opposition."

Frank, Eicher Considered

"I think we will be disposed to act rather quickly unless such opposition develops," said the sub-committee chairman.

Ashurst said Douglas will receive the "same thorough consideration" given the President's other appointments to the high bench—Hugo Black, Stanley Reed and Felix Frankfurter, all confirmed.

First to inform the sandy-haired SEC chairman of his appointment was Jerome Frank, a fellow commissioner, who stopped at his desk to congratulate him. Feet perched characteristically on a table top, Douglas later posed for photographs, but declined all comment.

His successor as SEC chairman is likely to be either Frank, who brought him the tidings, or Commissioner Edward C. Eicher, of Iowa, former member of the House and member of the President's anti-monopoly investigating committee.

Brought to Washington as a "militant liberal," but in his own estimation "a pretty conservative sort of fellow," Douglas, since taking over James Landis' seat at the head of the SEC table, has reorganized the New York Stock Exchange, forced removal of associates of Richard Whitney, and has firmly insisted on public utility compliance.

Spring to Make Bow Today

Much to the surprise of any number of persons, spring will make its bow to Washington today at 7:29 a. m., but to officials of the United States Naval Observatory the sun's jaunt across the earth's beltline is old stuff—they could have told you 20 years ago.

Blonde Mrs. Douglas, Mother Of 2, to Be Youngest Court Wife

William Douglas, jr., and Mildred Douglas had a big hug and kiss waiting for their father, William Douglas, 40, when he returned home yesterday after being nominated by President Roosevelt to fill vacancy on Supreme Court bench created by retirement of Associate Justice Louis Brandeis. Brings Badminton, at Which She Is Expert, To Exclusive Circle; Wed to Appointee When Both Taught High School in West

By appointing William O. Douglas to the Supreme Court yesterday President Roosevelt gave the small circle of justices' wives who add so much charm and glitter to Washington society their youngest member and their first expert badminton player.

Blonde, blue eyed and radiant, Mrs. Douglas adds dash and modern views to any gathering she joins. She is as informal as her husband—and plans to stay that way, she maintained yesterday. The badminton games will continue three or four times a week as usual. Comings and goings in the big red house where the Douglases live behind unlocked doors in Silver Spring, Md., will remain on their same gaily hurried schedule.

She "Couldn't Be Happier"

Although she admitted her "feet scarcely touched the floor," she played her Monday afternoon game of badminton at the "Y" yesterday as usual. Returning home in socks just before the movie cameras rolled up for photographs at 5:30 o'clock, she exclaimed:

"I just couldn't be happier. It's really marvelous!"

Married to Mr. Douglas in 1923—while they both were high school teachers on the West Coast—she saw him through his postgraduate days at Columbia University and the early professional days at Yale, when she and he were about the only ones who thought he might "some day set the world on fire," although the Douglas brains were by no means a secret by that time.

Reading Also a Hobby

"Everything he has done he has loved to do. He eats work up, and I think he's going to like this," she declared.

Next to badminton, which has helped her keep the slender figure of a very young girl and has done no damage to the exquisite complexion that often goes with girls from Oregon, Mrs. Douglas probably likes reading best among her hobbies.

Last week she expressed her sympathy with the labor movement by helping feed Washington's hotel strikers. She claims, however, that she cannot be considered a "working member" of any organization.

"I belong to the League of Women Shoppers and thoroughly approve of what it is doing, but most of my time really goes to keeping house and being with the children," she said.

The children are Mildred, who is 9, and William, jr., who will be 7

Rep. Cox Slaps Leader of WPA Workers

Tells Two Georgians Here to Lobby They Should Be Plowing

Incensed by a remark of a vice president of the District Workers' Alliance, Representative Cox, peppery Georgia Democrat, slapped the man's face yesterday in a corridor of the House.

The Workers' Alliance official, Theodore Ozmun, had called Cox from the floor of the House on behalf of two Southern members of the alliance who had come to Washington for a WPA workers' conference designed to press for passage of the $150,000,000 relief bill now under consideration in an appropriations sub-committee.

Ozmun, 30 years old, was said by witnesses to have told Cox that the two Southern workers were anxious that he vote for the full $150,000,000 when the bill reaches the floor of the House.

The 58-year-old Congressman is reported to have answered that the workers—one of whom was colored—would be better off working behind plows, instead of coming to a Workers' Alliance conference in Washington. He is said to have added that he didn't like the activities of the Workers' Alliance in Georgia.

Ozmun, spokesman for the Workers' Alliance trio, was said to have told Cox that the relief group had members in his district, but Cox

Man Disregards Pleas, Leaps 125 Feet to Death

Richmond, Va., March 20 (AP).—R. D. Glass, a partner of the artist supply firm of Waite & Glass, leaped 125 feet to death from the Robert E. Lee bridge shortly after noon today.

Coroner G. Z. Williams, who examined the body, said the man died instantly when he struck the pavement of a street which passes under the bridge.

Detective Sergeants Parker and Inman said they tried to persuade the man not to jump when they found him standing outside the bridge railing.

Elliott Roosevelt Calls Garner Leading 1940 Party Candidate

By the Associated Press.

Fort Worth, Tex., March 20.—Vice President Garner was described as "in the driver's seat right now, well in the lead as a likely Democratic candidate for the Presidency in the 1940 elections" by Elliott Roosevelt in his semiweekly broadcast tonight.

Announcing a "custom" under which he will occasionally discuss Texas citizens who have influenced State, national and world affairs, the son of President Roosevelt selected for the first of the series Vice President Garner and Fred H. Vahlsing, at present of New York City, who operates a 10,000-acre truck garden in the Rio Grande Valley.

Young Roosevelt stressed Garner's simple home life at Uvalde, his reticence toward public speaking, and the power he carries in legislative matters, a power which grew steadily from the time Garner went to Congress in 1903.

Commenting on differences between President Roosevelt and Garner, the young Roosevelt remarked:

"There is little room for doubt that Mr. Garner and the President

Veto Proviso Delays Vote on Merger Bill

Sen. Wheeler Charges Attempt to Deprive Congress of Power

Amid charges that Congress is "abdicating" legislative functions and following the model of "impotent" European parliaments, the Senate yesterday drove down the last lap toward passage of the Government reorganization bill.

Sole remaining obstacle to approval was the two-chamber veto provision of the House bill, against which the dictatorship warnings were directed.

Moving to replace this proviso with a requirement that Congress affirmatively accept or reject Presidential merger orders, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, cited November election returns as a protest against legislative "surrender."

"The whole trend in Europe is toward giving up parliamentary government, and giving it up to the executive branch," shouted Wheeler. "As long as I remain in Con-

Cold Postpones Cherry Blossom Fete Till March 31

The Cherry Blossom Festival yesterday was postponed one week to March 31-April 7 when officials were notified the blossoms at the Tidal Basin would not open in time for the original date.

C. Marshall Finnan, National Capital Parks superintendent, last night said the cherry trees should be blooming by March 31, barring unusual weather.

District Commissioners had proclaimed Cherry Blossom Week March 24 through March 31.

The postponement will not alter the program, officials said.

Coronation of Miss Peggy Townsend, Washington debutante, as festival queen will climax the opening day—Cherry Blossom Festival Day—at 4:30 p. m. at the Polo Field.

U. S. Army Calls Goethals to Duty

Boston, March 20 (U.P.).—Dr. Thomas R. Goethals, prominent Boston physician, tonight disclosed the War Department had ordered him to Washington next Monday for two weeks' military service in connection with outlining plans for mobilization of New England doctors.

The doctor is the youngest son of the late Gen. George Washington Goethals, who was in charge of Panama Canal construction.

U.S. Refuses To Recognize Czech Coup

Welles' Note to Berlin Calls Action Illegal; Legation at Prague Is Closed

By William V. Nessly.

While Germany was threatening yesterday to impose retaliatory penalty duties against United States exports, this Government formally notified the Nazi regime she does not recognize German seizure of power over Czecho-Slovakia as legal.

At the same time the United States called home her minister from Prague and closed her legation there because of lack of any Czecho-Slovakian officials with whom to deal.

Day's Developments

The foreign relations situation was clouded during the day by all these developing maneuvers and activities:

Berlin reports said "countervailing" 25 per cent extra duties placed by the United States against subsidized exports from the German-seized territories probably will be met by similar high imposts by Germany on United States copper, cotton and wheat.

Senator Pittman's new neutrality bill, calling for "cash-and-carry" munitions sales to all applicants, met with considerable Capitol Hill opposition, though Welles said it appeared to be in the "logical direction."

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, called on Welles but declined to reveal details of their talk or to answer questions as to whether he had brought a communication from his government.

The Commerce Department made public a study indicating Germans may be facing inflation. It said German finances, following the taking over of Austria and the Sudetendland are showing evidence of "expansion and strain."

The Commerce Department ordered Theodore J. Hadraba, acting commercial attache at Prague, to close his office at once, and said the staff will be assigned to other offices.

The House passed a bill authorizing the Government to lend agricultural, tariff and other experts to Latin-American countries in furtherance of the Administration's efforts to combat European influence in this hemisphere.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, introduced a measure to limit drastically activities of aliens and to curb interference with military discipline.

Note Not Yet Public

Acting Secretary of State Welles yesterday sent to the German Embassy here this Government's reply to Berlin's notification that she had established a "protectorate" over the land of the Czechs and Slovaks.

While the text of Welles' note has not yet been published, it is said to

Union Members Ratify Settlement Of Hotel Strike

In a mass meeting at the Belasco Theater 2,000 cheering former strikers yesterday ratified the compromise settlement of the two-week walkout at 13 Washington hotels. The final draft will be reviewed for official approval by operators and union representatives at the Labor Department today.

Hailing as a victory the provisions of the contract for a "preferential union shop," whereby all future hotel employes shall be hired from the union or become union members within two days, strikers agreed to go back to work immediately.

Hotel officials said labor conditions are expected to return to normal in time for Cherry Blossom Week.

Dixon, best known for his book, "The Clansman," which was filmed as "The Birth of a Nation," is clerk of Federal District Court here and Mrs. Dixon is deputy clerk.

Nazi Army Reported Moving on Rumania

King Calls Generals; Yields to German Trade Demands; Hungarians Restive

By Ferdinand Jahn,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Bucharest, March 20.—King Carol II tonight summoned his military leaders into emergency council at the royal palace following unconfirmed reports that four columns of the German army were marching across Slovakia toward the Rumanian frontier.

Rumania's fears of a swift blow at her frontier, either by Germany or neighboring Hungary, led to food hoarding and a small run on banks by depositors.

A few hours before he summoned the military council King Carol received British Minister Sir Reginald Hoare, who told him of efforts underway to form an international bloc which would support Rumania in resisting any Nazi aggression.

Increasing tension along the Rumanian-Hungarian border, and the rumors of German troop movements eastward along the Danube were aggravated by a dispatch from Budapest indicating Reichsfuehrer Hitler had asked permission to move German troops across Hungary.

Demonstrations and disorders in Transylvania, once Hungarian territory and hotbed of Hungarian minority demands, were reported from Oradea, Arad, Timishoaro and several other villages. Rumanian officials asserted the disorders had been fomented from the Hungarian side of the border.

2,000,000 Men Available

The Budapest radio station was alleged to be broadcasting messages to the Hungarian minority in Rumania assuring it of "forthcoming liberation."

Rumanian had poured about 200,000 troops into the border areas in the last five days under a "state of readiness" and is prepared to call 2,000,000 men to the colors under general mobilization if necessary.

Reservists of the Second Army Corps stationed in Bucharest awaited momentary call to the colors.

At the same time Rumania sought to offset her new economic concessions to Germany by pushing through a trade agreement with Soviet Russia in an effort to preserve as much neutrality as possible in the face of Hitler's drive along the Danube toward the Black Sea.

The British minister had a long conference with King Carol at the palace. Hoare had talked earlier with Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu.

British Offer Trade Help

Sir Reginald was understood to have given the King assurances of British economic aid, to be worked out by a British mission which will be sent to Bucharest immediately, and to have described the plan to establish a "Stop Hitler" bloc.

When the British minister left the palace the King summoned his military and political advisors, including Minister of Interior Armand Calinescu, War Minister Gen. Ciuperea and the chief of the general staff to study the situation along the Hungarian frontier, where a brief clash occurred during the day.

It was revealed in responsible quarters that Carol's government is negotiating with the Soviets, simultaneously concluding a German-Rumanian trade protocol increasing in some instances trade with Germany, particularly in petroleum, by as much as 25 per cent.

The new German trade agreement supplements a pact signed last November and represents the GREAT BRITAIN'S leaders after a day of conference were unable to decide whether to fight for Rumania if she were invaded. A meeting of European powers was considered "to stop Hitler."

Poles to Fight For Danzig Or Rumania

5,000,000 Men Available to Oppose Nazis, Paris Is Told

By Paul Thiriet.
International News Service

Paris, March 20.—The French government has been informed Poland would go to war immediately in the event of a German attempt to take Danzig or a German invasion of Rumania, it was learned tonight.

Word of Poland's decision was carried to French Foreign Minister Bonnet Saturday by Jujusz Lukasiewicz, Polish Minister to France.

The Polish war machine would go into action op Rumania's side against a German invasion despite the fact that the present Polish-Rumanian alliance guarantees protection only of King Carol's eastern frontier against an attack by Soviet Russia.

It was learned further that Lukasiewicz told Bonnet the Polish peacetime army consists of 40 divisions, but that in case of war Warsaw could call up 5,000,000 men.

The Polish minister also said that in the event of hostilities between Russia and Nazi Germany, Poland would not permit Russian armed

Canterbury Asks Pope to Issue Peace Encyclical

London, March 20. (I.N.S.)—The Archbishop of Canterbury tonight suggested Pope Pius XII choose this moment of high international tension for the issuance of a declaration for peace.

In a speech before the House of Lords the primate of the Anglican church declared:

"It is obvious that His Holiness is entitled to choose his own time and way but, if he is willing to make such a declaration, I could promise him that all leaders of the Orthodox, Anglican and Protestant churches would give simultaneous support."

London Questions Greece, Yugoslavia On Aid for Carol; Soviet Asks Parley

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, March 20.—The British government late tonight was still unable to make up its mind whether to fight for Rumania if that country is the next to be invaded by Germany, or whether to remain on the sidelines and let Rumania, with its rich oil and grain supplies, fall to Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

France and Russia have already assured Downing street that they can be relied upon to defend Rumania against aggression. Poland is believed to have given a similar assurance. But Britain is not prepared to go ahead on the basis of these assurances alone; she wants to know what assistance may be expected from such states as Greece, Yugoslavia and Turkey.

Greece Strategic Key

For strategic reasons, particular attention is being paid to Greece. The Greek Minister was at the Foreign Office for more than an hour today. In the event of war in the Mediterranean, with Italy allied with Germany, the British navy would wish to make use of Greek ports. The British are not sure of the attitude of the Greeks, who live under a pro-British king and a pro-German dictator.

Turkey also is a question mark, since her present dictator is less pro-British than his predecessor, Kemal Ataturk. If Britain decides to send a fleet into the Black Sea to assist a beleaguered Rumania, she will require permission from Turkey to pass through the refortified Dardanelles.

Yugoslavia in Danger

Yugoslavia, with her large army, could be a bulwark to the neighboring Rumania. Unfortunately, she has other neighbors, Germany, Italy and Hungary, who might be only too eager to partition her, after the manner of Czecho-Slovakia.

Under the circumstances, the lesser nations of southeastern Europe are reluctant to deliver a direct "yes" answer to Britain's question. They think big nations like Britain should vote "yes" first. As they see it, Prime Minister Chamberlain is putting up ballot boxes in Downing street for small nations to cast votes for or against fighting Hitler. On the basis of the score, Chamberlain will decide whether Britain should transmute its "Stop Hitler!" policy from speech into action.

Carol Awaits British Stand

The Rumanian Minister, who appealed to Viscount Halifax, the foreign secretary, for help last Friday, called at the foreign office again today and asked the British to make clear to Hitler, in the bluntest possible way, just where the British stand, and whether they intend to fight for Rumania. That country insists she will defend herself if attacked, but she is still waiting to hear what Britain intends to do.

America continued to figure prominently in the troubled European picture. Joseph P. Kennedy, the American Ambassador, called today to see Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer. Presumably they discussed the financial aspects of Hitler's absorption of Czecho-Slovakia and the Anglo-American boycotts thereof.

Later in the day Herschel V. Johnson, counsellor and No. 2 man of the American embassy, visited

'Dictatorship' Laws Put France On Virtual Wartime Footing

By Michael Wilson.

Paris, March 20.—A series of 16 sweeping decrees were signed by President Lebrun tonight in a spectacular move placing the French nation on a virtual war time footing under the firm rule of Premier Daladier, the new "dictator of defense."

Acting swiftly to forestall further German or Italian aggressive action either in Europe or North Africa, the decrees empower Daladier immediately to call to the colors thousands of French reserves, scrap the long standing 40-hour work week and mobilize all French industry to deal effectively with the international emergency.

Thus, by a single stroke, France, within 48 hours, will be more strongly entrenched for war than at any time since the World War. Not since the outbreak of that conflict has any other premier possessed the power granted to Daladier tonight.

The laws, signed by Lebrun after Daladier conferred with the chiefs

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Honolulu, U. S. A., March 20.

NEW MELTING POT.

During dinner the hula girls were dancing on the terrace at the Royal Hawaiian. I noticed some curious variations from the native Hawaiian type in the faces of the six girls in green grass skirts.

Harlan Miller

"Are all those girls pure Hawaiians?" I asked the lady on my right, whose ancestors came here from Connecticut a century ago as missionaries.

* * * *

"No, not at all," she replied. "The second one from the left is half Japanese. The one next to her is half Chinese. The one on the end is part Portuguese and I think one of them has a touch of Korean."

Both the Chinese-Hawaiian and the Japanese-Hawaiian girls were tallish, slim and pretty. Their eyes slanted just a trifle. Between dances they seemed to be great chums.

* * * *

The blend of nationalities and races here is amazing, but even more extraordinary is the amiable, friendly, frictionless way they get along beside the native Hawaiians, Japanese and Chinese. There are many Filipinos, Portuguese, Koreans and Porto Ricans. Honolulu is as much an American melting pot as New York or Chicago, in its own way, and in some respects the ingredients melt and amalgamate more rapidly.

"—the military are suspicious"

There's quite an exchange of badinage between white residents here and the army about the degree to which the 150,000 Japanese (out of the 400,000 population in the island) have become Americanized. The civilians say they are thoroughly American; the military are more skeptical.

"But then the army is paid," say the civilians, "to be suspicious. It's their profession."

The civilians see a great difference between the 110,000 young Japanese who were born in Hawaii and therefore are American citizens and their parents, the 40,000 middle-aged and elderly Japanese who came here before 1908 and are still aliens, ineligible for citizenship. The young ones, aver the civilians, have been rapidly Americanized and are loyal to the Stars and Stripes.

* * * *

But the army and navy point out that the older Japanese insist on sending their children and grandchildren to Japanese language schools for an hour or so after the American schools end their classes at 1:30 each afternoon. They emphasize the anomaly of "dual citizenship," whereby the older Japanese not only have retained their own Japanese citizenship, but have also in some cases registered the names of the Japanese-born American or citizenship back home.

"—welt politik at Waikiki"

The civilians are apt to tell you that as the older Japanese pass on during the next two decades, the last hold of Japan on the American-born children of Japanese ancestry will disappear and the "Japanese problem" will vanish.

Also, they declare that there have been no espionage scandals brought to light. The military look mysterious on this point, and what the files of the military intelligence division would show is a great secret.

* * * *

Most of the good servants in the homes of affluent American haoles (whites) are of Japanese descent, and even in the officers' quarters at the Pearl Harbor Navy Yard there are many Japanese servants. But boys of Japanese ancestry are not allowed to enlist in the regular Army and Navy, even though they are ostensibly eligible. Usually they are "not tall enough."

* * * *

As if further to confuse a mainlander who is curious about the "Japanese problem," my dinner partner on the terrace, with a full moon gleaming over the palms of Waikiki Beach—a lady whose family has lived here for 100 years—after assuring me during two courses that the Japanese are good Americans ended up by saying: "But what would we do if we got into trouble with Japan? All our servants are Japanese. We trust them and thank God for them, but they might poison us or slit our throats. But we really don't believe that." That's the woman of it.

Roosevelt Asks Bond Limit Be Raised

Message Proposes Adjustment Without Total Debt Increase

By the Associated Press.

To facilitate the Treasury's borrowing operations, President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to abolish the present limitation on the amount of Government bonds which may be outstanding at one time, without raising the limit which present law imposes on the size of the public debt.

The statute now in effect fixes the latter limit at $45,000,000,000, of which not more than $30,000,000,000 may be in bonds or long-term obligations. A letter from Secretary Morgenthau attached to the Chief Executive's message proposed that the $3,000,000,000 restriction be abolished altogether.

The President, interpreting his Cabinet member's communication, said the latter felt "very strongly that it will be necessary to increase the present limitation of $30,000,000,000 face amount of bonds which may be outstanding at any one time." He added:

"I recommend that the Congress take such action as may be necessary to give the Treasury the authority which will enable it to carry out its financing operations during the next fiscal year as may be for the best interest of the Government in line with market conditions at the time of such financing."

Morgenthau's letter said that at present the Treasury, under the $45,000,000,000 limitation on the total public debt, could borrow about $5,000,000,000 more, which he said "should be sufficient to carry the Treasury well into" 1940.

The text of President Roosevelt's message on the debt limit follows:

I am transmitting herewith a letter dated March 17, 1939, from the Secretary of the Treasury regarding the limitation placed upon the total amount of the public debt obligations which may be issued and outstanding at any one time under authority of the second liberty bond act, as amended.

You will note from this letter that the Secretary of the Treasury feels that there will be no necessity for increasing the present limitation of $45,000,000,000 on the total public debt which may be outstanding at any one time, but does feel very strongly that it will be necessary to increase the present limitation of $30,000,000,000 face amount of bonds which may be outstanding at any one time.

Asks Action on Bonds

I recommend that the Congress take such action as may be necessary to give the Treasury the authority which will enable it to carry out its financing operations the next fiscal year as may be for the best interest of the Government in line with market conditions at the time of such financing.

The Morgenthau letter follows:

"My Dear Mr. President:

"The second liberty bond act, as amended, provides that the face amount of bonds, certificates or indebtedness, Treasury bills and notes issued under the authority of that act, and certificates of indebtedness issued under the authority of secion 6 of the first liberty bond act, shall not exceed in the aggregate $45,000,000,000 outstanding at any one time and provides further that the face amount of bonds issued within that limitation shall not exceed in the aggregate $30,000,000,000 outstanding at any one time.

"At the present time the Treasury can issue approximately $5,000,000,000 face amount of additional public-debt obligations under the second liberty bond act. On the basis of the current budget estimates this balance will be sufficient to carry the Treasury well into 1940. I do not believe, therefore, that it is necessary to request at this time an increase in the limitation on the total debt that may be issued and outstanding under authority of the second liberty bond act, as amended.

Bond Limit Pressing

"The limitation of $30,000,000,000 on outstanding bonds presents, however, a different problem. The amount of bonds which the Treasury can issue within this limitation, after taking into consideration the March 15 refunding operations, is approximately $1,800,000,000. Taking into consideration our cash requirements between now and January 1, 1940, the monthly issuance of United States savings bonds, and the possible refunding operations which the Treasury may wish to conduct, it seems quite apparent that the balance of $1,800,000,000 will not be sufficient to give the Treasury that latitude required in its financing operations over the next few months.

"In order that the Treasury may be in a position to take advantage of favorable market conditions and not be forced to confine all of its financing operations to short-term obligations, I strongly urge that a recommendation be made to the Congress that the limitation of $30,000,000,000 on bonds be eliminated entirely so as to give the Treasury the flexibility it needs for its financing operations during the next fiscal year."

Woman Lawyer Wins Three-Year Civil Rights Fight

Lillian Clawans, Newark attorney, won in the District Court of Appeals yesterday her three-year battle for a principle of civil rights which she claimed was infringed by a $5 fine imposed here for disorderly conduct.

After one Government witness testified at her trial in 1935 the charge was withdrawn over her protest. Another information then was filed, making an identical charge. She claimed the first trial constituted prior jeopardy and that under the Constitution she could not be tried again. The Police Court disagreed and fined her $5.

Members of the Pipers Guild of America, shown above, will be heard here April 29 in final performance of the three-day National Folk Festival. They make their own instruments from bamboo and will play tunes from seven countries.

Since the days of the shepherds on ancient Greece, the humble but sweet-toned pipe has had its part in the folk music of all nations and all ages. Its mellow notes will be heard in Washington next month as a feature of the sixth annual National Folk Festival.

Performers will be members of the Pipers Guild of America who have made and decorated their own bamboo pipes. The guild, founded and directed by Jennie Cossitt, musical director of Union Settlement in New York City, is part of a world-wide movement to revive the art.

Pipers to Be Heard April 29

The pipers will be heard April 29 during the final performance of the three-day festival. Their program will include folk tunes from Scotland, Ireland, Germany, Russia, England and Holland as well as native American songs.

Immediately after the festival, Miss Cossitt will conduct a three-day institute for pipers and would-be pipers. Classes will be held in the making, decorating and playing of the instruments. Co-operating with Miss Cossitt will be Miss Margaret Lambie, director of the newly formed District of Columbia Pipers Guild, which is affiliated with the Pipers Guild of America.

"The local guild," according to Miss Lambie, "includes professional musicians as well as amateurs to whom this unique and original form of musical expression appeals."

Must Make Own Pipes

Before joining the Pipers Guild, which originated in London, one must promise never to buy or to sell a pipe. Thus the leaders of the revival movement hope to preserve the art of piping as a purely folk expression. They consider the manufacture and decoration of the instrument just as important as the playing of it. Many of the hand-made pipes are delicately wrought works of art, although the materials which go into them cost but a few cents.

In addition to the pipers, Miss Cossittt will bring from New York an international folk-dance group organized by Union Settlement.

The National Folk Festival, which opens April 27, is sponsored by The Washington Post Folk Festival Association. Reservations may be made by writing to The Washington Post.

Exchange Head Invited to Ask SEC Changes

Douglas Successor Bars Only Proposals Former Held 'Phoney'

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday informed the New York Stock Exchange it would be glad to consider any changes suggested by it in the securities act aside from those which Chairman William O. Douglas recently branded as "phoney."

George C. Mathews, who took over as acting chairman after Douglas was named to the Supreme Court, invited William McChesney Martin, stock exchange president, to roundtable conferences with the commission on proposed modifications of the statute in the interest of business recovery.

His letter to Martin was in reply to one in which the stock exchange head said Douglas' statement indicated a "misunderstanding on the part of the commission." The stock exchange, Martin said, is as much opposed as the SEC to "any step which would remove or in any way weaken the safeguards which have been set up for the protection of the public."

Mathews pointed out that Martin knew, of course, the commission's views in regard to relaxation of the ban against stock market manipulation, restriction against trading by insiders, and requirements for submission of financial data. It was those proposals Douglas rejected.

Gov. Lehman To Address Parole Conference Here

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, will speak on conservation of human resources at the National Paroic Conference here April 17 and 18, the Justice Department announced yesterday.

Attorney General Murphy will deliver the keynote address. Other speakers will include Gov. Saltonstall, of Massachusetts; President Robert M. Huchins, of the University of Chicago, and James V. Bennett, director of the Bureau of Prisons of the Justice Department.

Mgr. John O'Grady, of Catholic University, the department revealed, is to serve as chairman of the special committee on supervision of parolees.

Student Argues 'Official' Parking Signs Are Illegal

William Taggart, 27, a freshman law student, threw a verbal bombshell in Traffic Court yesterday with the contention that scores of traffic signs reserving parking spaces for "official" cars are illegal.

Taggart, who lives at Falls Church, Va., asked that three charges of parking in a zone governed by signs which read "Reserved for Holders of Official Permits," be dismissed. Referring to the traffic regulations, Taggart told Judge John P. McMahon that the signs should say "Reserved for Members of Congress and Government Officials When on Official Business." He contended that signs reading any other way are illegal.

Judge McMahon continued the cases for decision Thursday.

Congressmen From 33 States Urge President To Boost Flood Control Funds to 195 Million

By the Associated Press.

Increase from $110,000,000 to $195,000,000 of the budget estimate for flood control in the next fiscal year was recommended to President Roosevelt yesterday by a committee of Congressmen from 33 States.

Whittington

The group was headed by Representative Whittington (Democrat), Mississippi, who said the President "gave us a sympathetic hearing."

Asked by reporters how the increase would fit in with the economy program, Whittington said:

"We will have to let you answer that. We don't want to economize at the expense of flood control."

Senator Wiley (Republican), Wisconsin, who has sent four children through college, asked Congress to allow income taxpayers to deduct $400 for each child 21 years of age or younger. Under present law the tax payer is permitted to deduct $400 from income only until the child is 18.

"This," Wiley said, 'withdraws the deduction just at the time a child becomes the greatest expense to its parents."

Representative Thomas (Republican), New Jersey, demanded that the House investigate publicity activities of the Administration.

His resolution contended a 1913 law provided "no money appropriated shall be used for the compensation of any publicity experts unless specifically approated for that purpose" and that the act "has been grossly violated."

Elmer F. Andrews, who has been wage-hour administrator under a recess appointment, was nominated by President Roosevelt to the job yesterday as a regular appointee. He must be confirmed by the Senate.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to give the Maritime Commission more authority and discretion to dispose of Government-owned steamship lines. It would give the commission power to negotiate bids for sale of vessels with a company not now eligible by law.

The Senate Judiciary Committee recommended confirmation of the nomination of Robert P. Patterson, New York district judge, to be a judge of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals.

Patterson was nominated to succeed Judge Martin T. Manton, who resigned recently after an investigation of his affairs was instituted.

J. Y. Reeves Renamed D. C. Probation Officer

Chief Justice Wheat announced yesterday that the District Court justices had reappointed Joseph Y. Reeves as probation officer for a two-year term, which begins April 1. The post pays $3,500 a year.

Garner Assails Growth of Federal Power

Reiterates States' Rights Stand Given In 1932 Statement

By the Associated Press.

Vice President Garner, it was learned yesterday, is answering inquiries about his stand on governmental policies by citing a statement of views he made in 1932. He says he now holds the same opinions.

The 1932 statement was contained in a letter accepting the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination. Foregoing the usual notification ceremony, Garner wrote Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, his philosophy on government.

"There are just two things to this Government as I see it," the letter said. "The first is to safeguard the lives and properties of our people; the second is to insure that each of us has a chance to work out his destiny according to his talents.

Rules Change Often

"This involves protecting him from being injured or oppressed by those of superior acquisitiveness, and perhaps less conscience, who seek to strain the rules to their own advantage . . .

"In my opinion, nearly all of our civic troubles are the consequence of Government's departure from its legitimate functions . . . New conditions often make it necessary to change the rules in order to keep the balance between the people and those who would exploit them.

"Unfortunately, these changes and adjustments result too often in enhancing instead of diminishing the evils."

Garner, whom a group of Texas friends has advanced for the 1940 Presidential nomination, said in 1932:

"Had it not been for the steady encroachment of Federal Government on the rights and duties reserved for the States we perhaps would not have the present spectacle of the people rushing to Washington to set right whatever goes wrong . . .

"The gravitation of power to Washington has builded a structure of administration vast beyond the imagination of the builders of the Constitution."

Fought for Economy

In recent years, Garner often has used his influence in an effort to effect Government economies. In 1932 he had this to say:

"Republicans . . . promised economy in 1920 and 1924. And in 1928 they gave assurance of maximum efficiency at minimum cost. Despite their pledges, the costs of Government have mounted steadily. They were $3,848,000,000 in the first Hoover year. They were over five billion in the fiscal year just closed."

Taxi Insurance Rate May Be Cut in Capital

Inquiry Ordered Into Charges Fees Are Excessive

A hint that District taxicab liability insurance rates may be lowered came yesterday from J. Balch Moor, superintendent of insurance, after the House District Committee ordered an investigation of charges that rates are too high.

Moor retorted that District rates of $21 a month or $5 a week are below insurance charges for taxicabs in comparable cities, but he added that the loss ratio has been so small that reduction may be ordered after the mutual companies have time to build up adequate reserve funds to insure prompt payment of claims.

Representatives Bates, Dirksen and Bolles joined in complaints that the rates are excessive.

The committee decided to summon Moor to make a detailed report of the operations of the taxi liability insurance law. Moor last night said he saw no need for an investigation as all his records are "an open book."

The taxi insurance rates in Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and other large cities exceed the charges in Washington, he said. Baltimore, he stated, permits a rate of $35 a month.

This morning a sub-committee headed by Representatives McArdle (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, will open hearings on a District bill to authorize the Public Utilities Commission to reduce the number of cabs licensed in Washington.

2 U. S. Agencies Join in Study Of Rail vs. Water Freight Rates

By the Associated Press.

Two Government agencies began yesterday a joint study of comparative freight rates on shipments by rail and by water.

The hearing, conducted by examiners of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Maritime Commission, involved directly transportation charges on citrus fruits from Florida to Baltimore.

However, ship line officials said the case actually concerned the general question of rate differentials on all commodities hauled by rail and water.

They said water lines could operate only with rate levels substantially lower than those charged by railroads. They argued little if any differential existed on citrus shipments.

J. B. Sweeney, vice president and traffic manager of the Merchants and Miners Transportation Co., told the examiners he had asked railroads to increase their citrus rates. He said they had refused.

The hearing was called after Sweeney's company made application to the Maritime Commission for authority to reduce the water rate on Florida-Baltimore citrus shipments.

He put in the hearing record a letter from C. McD. Davis, vice president of the Atlantic Coast Line Railway, which said:

"I would regret any move on your part to reduce your present rate from Jacksonville to Baltimore because I would feel under the necessity of making corresponding reductions in the all-rail rates with consequent loss of revenue to M. & M. T. Co., as well as to the rail lines.

Unemployed Chef Would Trade Winnings For $20 a Week Job

"Whatsa $1,000—I'll trade it for a good job at $20 a week."

That's the way Luigi Bertini, 61-year-old unemployed Italian chef, yesterday described his luck in holding a winning ticket on the Irish Sweepstakes Friday.

Bertini, one of four Washingtonians to reap returns, owned his ticket jointly with Frank Cristarello, a tailor with whom he lives at 539 Third street northeast. They drew a nonrunnner in the big event—Koppernick, which has already been scratched—but will split $2,492 for having their horse's name tumble out of the spinning drum at Dublin. Bertini has been unemployed for four years—hence his willingness to swap.

The same amount of prize money will go to Mrs. Esther Abrahams, wife of a retired jeweler, of the 4800 block of Iowa avenue northwest. She purchased her ticket under the name of "Battle Ax and Five Stooges."

"Four Hopefuls" at 2231 Bancroft place northwest, drew Tame Willow, one of the starting entries and stand to split a fortune. Another nonstarter was drawn by Miss Emily Dunham, 3200 Sixteenth street northwest.

Two hundred and seventy-six United States ticket-holders drew chances to win $150,000. Though 495 Americans drew tickets on horses, each of which is sure to pay $2,650, only 276 hold tickets on horses scheduled to run in the race.

Americans did particularly well with favorites, drawing 42 out of 65 tickets available on Kilstar, Royal Danieli, orkman, Teme Willow and Royal Mail.

The Dublin draw is divided into 13 prize units, with 13 tickets to be drawn on each horse entered in the race. Today 50 residual prizes of $4,210 each and 1,300 of $500 each will be drawn.

Pay-as-You-Go Social Security Basis Advanced

Economist Presents Seven-Point Program To House Committee

Improved technology may enable the American people to pay for their social security system out of increased productivity, on a "pay-as-you-go" basis, Merryle Stanley Rukeyser, well-known economics commentator, told the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday.

Soundness of such financing, with payroll taxes "frozen" at present levels, was urged by Rukeyser, who served as chairman of the Nonpartisan Social Security Commission, composed of economists and business executives.

Rukeyser presented seven recommendations of the commission, looking toward sweeping revision of the social security act, a major Congressional issue since revelations that errors may have been made in its drafting before enactment.

The recommendations were:

1—Begin old-age benefits in 1940 instead of 1942.

2—Increase benefits to aged in early years of operation.

3—Share the benefits with widows.

4—Establish moderate contingency reserve instead of the huge $47,000,000,000 reserve now contemplated.

5—Extend benefits to national bank clerks, maritime workers and educational and religious institutions' employes.

6—Avoid excessive payroll taxes.

7—Insist upon the earmarking of Federal receipts to support social security.

Rukeyser stressed the necessity for lightening tax burdens on business in times of economic strain, and declared old-age assistance payroll taxes could be so modified without disturbing the Social Security System's efficiency.

Nazis Expect Memel to Join Reich Soon

Berlin Recalls Envoy From Paris; Troops on Move in East Prussia

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Berlin, March 20.—The return of the semiautonomous Lithuanian city of Memel to Germany, from which it was severed at the end of the World War, seemed tonight to be a matter of days, or weeks at the most, as Foreign Minister Juozas Urbsys of Lithuania returned to Kaunas after a conference with German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop.

The conference, it was learned on high authority, ended an a stalemate and Urbsys rushed home for consultations with his ministers on the attitude they will take if the Reich decides on aggressive action.

Faced with the German demands —their nature was not revealed— the spokesman for the tiny Baltic nation decided against making any compromise offer, it was learned.

Although the gravely controversial matter was left up in the air, German circles believed the next two days would tell whether Lithuania would seek what is called "an amicable solution" or would leave Memel to its fate.

Qualified circles asserted the German government offered a four-point program to solve the controversy "without tumult." This would be as follows:

Lithuania would abandon Memel completely.

Germany would guarantee Lithuania's frontiers.

Lithuania would be given a free port since the loss of Memel, the nation's outlet to the sea, would be a severe blow.

There would be no "immediate" military occupation of Memel.

Troops Moving

An indication that the Lithuanian authorities are seeking desperately to avoid a head-on collision with the mighty German military machine was seen in messages from Memel reporting the military commander of the city had issued a decree exempting Memelanders from compulsory military service. Volunteers will be accepted, however.

Unofficial quarters in Paris received reports tonight of heavy troop movements near Tilsit and considered them a grave German threat to Memel. Paris circles believed Urbsys had been called to Berlin to receive an ultimatum similar to the one given Czech President Emil Hacha before the German armies occupied Bohemia and Moravia.

Well informed quarters in Berlin predicted Memel would pass "painlessly" under the swastika by Saturday, but expressed the belief that for the time being neither Lithuania nor the Danzig Corridor would be touched.

Saturday was suggested as the date for the next addition to the fast-growing Reich because on that day Ernst Neumann, German leader in Memel, is expected to address open demands to Kaunas. He will call upon Lithuania, it is understood, to allow Memel to become an entirely free city similar to Danzig. It was believed he might also demand a "token occupation" by German troops.

Meantime, Great Britain replaced the United States as the chief target of Nazi attacks as the press inveighed bitterly against the reported British attempt to "interfere" with the conclusion of a German-Rumanian trade pact.

Paris Envoy Recalled

The government completed the series of ambassadorial withdrawals between Berlin, London, Paris and Washington by calling home Count Johannes von Welczech from Paris. It was also considered possible that Friedrich von Schulenberg, the envoy to Soviet Russia, might be recalled from Mossow for "consultation."

Qualified government quarters emphasized that the withdrawal of the German ambassadors from London and Paris was intended specifically to demonstrate Hitler's displeasure, and that they would have been called home even if French Ambassador Coulondre and British Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson had not been withdrawn from Berlin.

Berlin Excitement Wanes

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, March 20.—Citizens took down today the Nazi banners which have flown over the city for more than a week and prepared for at least a temporary pause in the feverish activity with which Germany has been growing.

A meeting late this afternoon of Reichsfuehrer Hitler with almost all the leaders of the German government was followed by a report Marshal Goering will return tomorrow to Italy, to resume his interrupted vacation.

Other signs here were believed to indicate Germany's partner in the Rome-Berlin axis is being consulted about the next move.

The failure of Italy to congratulate Hitler on his "protectorate" of Bohemia and Moravia has not been mentioned here, and discussion of Italy's possible claims against France has, for the moment, disappeared. In political circles here it is considered more than probable that Goering will see Premier Mussolini personally during the next few days.

Today's meeting of Nazi leaders in Hitler's new chancellery broke up without any announcement about the Reichstag meeting, which has been generally expected. In recent years Reichstag sessisons have been used by Hitler "to render an account" only after each of his spectacular exploits has been completed.

Hurban, 'Sitting Tight,' Still Calls Self Czech Minister After Visit to Benes

Germany Postpones Building Embassy as Architect Resigns

"I'm sitting tight."

There was a trace of pathos in his voice as Col. Vladmir S. Hurban, minister from Czecho-Slovakia, spoke those words yesterday.

But with evident determination—following a Chicago conference with Dr. Eduard Benes, former Czech president—he reaffirmed an earlier stand against surrender of his Washington legation to the German government.

Architect Offended

Almost as Col. Hurban spoke, after stepping from a Chicago plane at the airport, there came from the German Embassy an announcement that plans for new quarters here had been "indefinitely postponed." This dove-tailed with the resignation of Harry Francis Cunningham, local architect, as co-designer of the proposed structure on S street.

Cunningham withdrew his services, explaining: "Astounding events of the past few days are offensive to my American ideals."

He had, in the last several months, been collaborating with Prof. F. A. Breuhaur, of Berlin, on plans for the new Reich embassy fronting on S street between Bancroft and Phelps places northwest.

Holds Self Still Minister

Cunningham said he had "many friends in Czecho-Slovakia" and was "shocked" by the Nazi invasion. He agreed with Col. Hurban that only as a "last resort" should the Czech Legation here be relinquished. "The Germans pick up so many embassies for nothing," he asked. "Why do they need to build any?"

With the apparent approval of his former president, Dr. Hurban said he intended to hang on to his country's possessions here in spite of German demands for surrender. As he stepped from the American Airlines flagship the dapper minister, his brisk pace belying middle age, hurried through a crowd of well-wishers, pausing only long enough to tell reporters:

"I'm sitting tight. As long as the United States Government doesn't recognize the rape of Czecho-Slovakia, I am—from the legal standpoint—still minister and I shall stay here."

Shouts of "Bravo" and "Attaboy" came from those within earshot as Col. Hurban talked.

Nothing to Smile About

The diplomat appeared tired. Posing for pictures with his wife, he was asked to smile.

"Smile?" he bristled, "I have nothing to smile about—don't be silly."

He declined to comment on his conversation with Dr. Benes or the former Czech president's radio speech from Chicago where he is lecturing at Chicago University.

Indicating he would release a statement outlining his discussion with Dr. Benes later, Col. Hurban said:

"Dr. Benes has spoken and there is nothing left to say at the moment —except to say I intend to hold tight. Isn't that enough?"

Nazi Hits Architect

A spokesman for Dr. Hans Thomsen, German charge d'affaires, said Architect Cunningham's resignation "in no way" affected plans for the embassy.

"We have no immediate idea of continuing work on the new embassy," said the spokesman. "The plans have not been abandoned, but we have received no word from Berlin to proceed—and I don't believe we will for some time."

Declaring Cunningham's refusal to continue with the job because he had received little co-operation was "just a pretext," the German spokesman said "we can always get another architect."

Calls Nazis Dilatory

Cunningham, in his letter to Dr. Thomsen, said:

"Astounding events of the past few days—events which have profoundly shocked every believer in, and lover of, honor and uprightness in personal and national dealings—are so offensive to my solidly founded American ideals that it is impossible for me to be of any further service to your government.

"Since last September your government architects have consistently avoided giving me necessary information which was requested many times; they have persistently avoided answering questions on the work—in short, they have piled embarrassment upon embarrassment and have displayed dilatory tactics which have been exceedingly detrimental to the efficient progress of the work and very costly to me and my engineering collaborators."

Cunningham served as an architect for devastated areas in France from 1920 to 1922, drawing plans for rebuilding 17 destroyed villages. He was architcet for the Brazilian Chancery here and many clubs, apartment houses and other structures. He served as a major in the A. E. F.

In contrast to the contemplated German edifice, the modest stone building at 2349 Massachusetts avenue, stands as one of the last remaining strongholds of the routed Czech government.

"Nobody Knows," Says Aide

On a small knoll, the Czech property impresses passerby by its simplicity.

Inside, a staircase spreads fanwise to the upper stories. On the right is the private office of Col. Hurban. He sits behind a small, modern desk.

The walls of the legation are covered with landscapes of a peaceful, contented country.

A poster in the chancery advertised the Prague International Fair. An attache was asked if the fair would be held.

"Nobody knows," he almost whispered. "Nobody knows anything."

express views similar to those contained in his public statement of last Friday, when he condemned the "temporary extinguishment" of the liberties of the Czecho-Slovak peoples, and said there had been "wanton lawlessness."

The State Department's order to close the legation at Prague followed word from Wilbur J. Carr, minister, detailing the steps taken by Germany to assume complete control of the country.

"There are consequently," Carr reported, "no officials of the Czecho-Slovakian government to which I am accredited, with whom I can maintain relations for the protection of the interests of the United States and its citizens."

Carr was instructed to turn over the government building and property to the consulate general and to leave Prague, a separate message summoning him home.

Welles' message said:

"The President has requested me to express to you his particular appreciation of the highly distinguished service you have rendered . . ."

It added that "the services you have rendered are a matter of pride to the entire foreign service with which you have been closely connected over a period of so many years."

"Parallel Action" Denied

Welles repeated at his press conference that he had no knowledge of reported plans for a "Stop Hitler" conference between Britain, France, the United States and Russia. He declared there had been no exchange of views with any other government on the Czecho-Slovakian situation, and that the sending of a trade mission to Rumania, as the British are doing, was not under consideration here.

In commenting that the Pittman neutrality bill seemed to move in a "logical direction," Welles said Pittman had correctly stated it was not an Administration measure.

The Pittman bill was termed by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, "a bill to facilitate the United States' drifting into war."

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, declared:

"I don't want to give the Executive power to declare war. The Constitution says Congress is the sole power to declare war."

The German threat of retaliatory tariffs was printed in the Berlin financial newspaper Boersen Zeitung, which said the action probably would be withheld until those sections of the United States to be affected could bring pressure to bear on this government to modify the order for countervailing duties.

Nazi Finances 'Strained'

The Commerce Department study said German finances were "showing evidence of expansion and strain."

It added:

"There has been a considerable acceleration during the past year in the issue of consolidated loans, which can be ascribed only in part to the increased financial needs resulting from the annexation of Austria and Sudetenland.

"The note circulation of the Reichsbank reached on December 31, 1938, a new high of 8,222,647,000 marks, higher by 200,000,000 marks than the abnormal level during the September crisis.

Labor Shortage Cited

"These increases are of special significance when considered in the light of the growing realization that with an approach to full employment of labor and production facilities, mere creation of additional credit cannot increase production."

The shortage of labor was termed one of the most serious problems of Germany. It said there was a shortage of 1,000,000 workers this year, twice as great as last year, because of the great number of workers needed for armament and public works projects.

Lebrun Starts State Visit to England Today

Bonnet, Paris Foreign Minister, With Him On Historic Trip

By John Elliott.

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, March 20.—President Albert Lebrun will leave Paris early tomorrow morning on a state visit to England, which is likely to prove an historic journey. People who are fond of historical parallels recall that it was while President Poincare was returning from a state visit to the Czar of Russia in 1914 that the first World War broke out.

But, although it is unlikely history will repeat itself on this occasion, diplomatic conversations on the margin of the French President's visit are likely to overshadow official ceremonies.

President Lebrun is being accompanied by Georges Bonnet, French foreign minister, and Pierre Bressy, the latter's chef de cabinet. The formation of a common front of all the peace-loving countries in Europe to halt Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini, which probably would include Britain, France, Holland and Switzerland in western Europe, and Soviet Russia, Poland, Rumania and the Balkan Entente in eastern Europe, will certainly play a prominent part in the Anglo-French talks.

The transformation of the entente cordiale between the two countries into an alliance is also mentioned here as a possibility although, as the Entente is an alliance in everything but name, the only purpose of avowing its existence would be to restrain Mussolini, who is expected next Sunday to formulate officially his demands for colonial concessions from France.

forces to cross her border en route to the Reich.

Poland would, however, accept all Russian war material shipments for transport to other points, Bonnet was informed.

The Polish government also has assured Soviet Russia it will not mobilize troops along Poland's eastern frontier if the Soviet should become involved in war with Germany.

While Poland would fight for Danzig or Rumania, she will not precipitate a conflict in case of a German coup in Memel since it has been reported the Lithuanian government already has considered giving up the seaport district to the Reich.

On the other hand, Poland would go to war, it was learned, if Lithuanian territory proper is invaded.

of the French military general staff, gave the premier power to:

Call to the colors immediately the two classes of reserves last to have been released from military service, and the reserve troops who must man the Maginot Line of fortifications facing the German frontier, and to increase the framework of the French army by calling up all noncommissioned officers.

Create a new native regiment for action in the French territories, presumably those most easily menaced by Italy.

Double the effective strength of the Sixth French Military Region (the area around Metz, large city close to the German border.)

Order private industry to exercise priority in handling materials for national defense.

Increase hours of work anywhere in the nation and wherever it is deemed necessary.

Increase production in aircraft industries.

Advance credits to private industries working on products essential to national defense.

Reinforce the number of army engineer corps members in all armament factories.

Create an administration for national production which would be a subdivision of the National Defense Ministry.

Permit the government to mobilize technicians for work in factories under military orders.

News Control Centralized

Two more decrees related to the publication of military news, and to the centralization of such news within the offices of the ministry of war. The remaining four laws were of a purely local character.

Although the war ministry did not immediately put all 16 decrees into effect, it was believed certain this would be done within two or three days.

Baladier, who was given power to rule the French military and defense forces by overwhelming votes of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, also conferred today with the governors resident of France's North African territories.

At this extraordinary session it was learned he examined closely the possibility of transporting large numbers of men and quantities of war material across the Mediterranean.

Consideration of this and other related problems were aimed directly at heading off any possible attempt by Premier Mussolini to create a modern Roman empire in North Africa at the expense of France.

Through a day of discussions and promulgation of the decrees the French government gave practical meaning to the new French watchword that the answer to German Fuehrer Hitler's "bloodless" conquest of central Europe must be given in deeds rather than words.

One of the first steps taken by the premier under the decrees was the virtual taking over of control of the two major ports, Marseilles, on the Mediterranean, and Le Havre, on the English Channel.

Henceforth the autonomous port of Le Havre will be run by the national government. For Marseilles, the cabinet appointed a special administrator who, for the next six years, will have virtually dictatorial powers.

Finance Minister Reynaud was entrusted with the task of stepping up industrial production under military decrees, scrapping the 40-hour week. He set to work today in cooperation with other members of the cabinet and industrial leaders to draw plans for creating new armament factories.

Both Envoys Recalled

Meantime the last formal link short of actual severance of diplomatic relations between France and Germany was broken with the departure from Paris of German Ambassador Johannes von Welczech, returning to Berlin for "consultation."

It was reported former Premier Laval might be sent to Rome as unofficial mediator with Mussolini, with whom he concluded the recently ruptured pact of 1935, but there was no confirmation in official circles.

Daladier conferred today with Foreign Minister Bonnet and Robert Coulondre, French Ambassador to Germany, who arrived here from his Berlin post. He also talked with Russian Ambassador Jakob Souritz and British Charge d'Affaires Ronald Campbell.

Army Shifts To Free Men For Combat

Artillery Service Units Combined; Additional War Division Seen

The War Department has begun a reorganization of its service units, expected to release thousands of men for combat duty in time of war.

Officials said a recent survey of the Artillery showed headquarters and service batteries can be combined without loss of efficiency, effecting a saving of 2,000 men in that duty in war time. In approving new regulations consolidating the two servicing batteries, a department spokesman said the step marked the beginning of a survey of all arms looking to the reduction of "overhead" personnel.

Instructions have been issued to the general staff by its chief, Gen. Malin Craig, it was said, to review all tables of organization with a view to releasing more men to fighting echelons.

Additional Division Possible

One source said it was hoped that an additional division or two could be created out of troops released from noncombat duties.

Other defense developments:

House conferees on the $358,000,000 Army expansion bill reported the measure back to the House, citing "recent international developments" as justifying the increase in airplane strength from 5,500 to 6,000 voted by the Senate and agreed to in conference.

In a statement accompanying their report, the group declared that because of crashes, overhauls, etc., a strength in excess of 5,500 is necessary if an air force of that size is to be maintained in constant readiness. Final Senate and House action on the bill may come today.

Material Reserve Envisioned

The House Military Affairs Committee plans to report legislation today authorizing acquisition of a war reserve of "strategic and critical" materials. In view of the Administration's stand against spending more than $10,000,000 for this purpose next year, the first increment will be reduced to this figure, but the bill calls for spending $100,000,000 over four years.

An amendment offered by Representative Pace (Democrat), of Georgia, will be approved, it was said, authorizing the reserve stocks of manganese, tin, rubber, etc. to be paid for if possible by bartering surplus cotton and other commodities and by partial cancellation of war debts.

Chairman Bland, (Democrat), of Virginia, of the House Merchant Marine Committee, introduced a bill to carry out recommendations of Secretary Woodring for immediate construction of a spare set of locks at the Panama Canal. The measure would provide $15,000,000 next year for the $277,000,000 undertaking, proposed to safeguard free passage of the fleet in time of war.

Pilot Reserve Urged

The Civil Aeronautics Authority asked Congress to authorize training of 20,000 civil pilots as a reserve for the Army and Navy, to meet the threat of aggressor nations. Robert Hinckley, of the commission, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee enactment of the Lea bill to authorize the training would be a "formidable and salutary deterrent" to aerial attack on North or South America.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee delayed action of the naval phase of the emergency defense program pending receipt of a supplemental report from the special Hepburn board dealing with the location of major naval air bases in Florida and New England. The report is expected tomorrow.

The House Naval Affairs Committee meets today to report legislation to provide a supply base at Oakland, Calif., part of a long range plan to make San Francisco Bay a major naval base.

Single Department Urged

Representative Voorhis (Democrat) of California, introduced a bill to consolidate the War and Navy Departments into one department with assistant secretaries in charge of land, sea and air forces.

In discusing the plan to reduce the proportion of men performing non-combat duties, War Department officials said the only material saving would be in time of war. As units of the regular Army are kept considerably below their full strength in peace-time, the maintenance and servicing units cannot be materially cut.

Consolidation of the headquarters and service batteries of the Field Artillery will release only about 200 men from organized regular Army regiments, and this change will not be effected for some time, it was said.

Costa Rica Submits Bond Service Scheme

Dr. Ricardo Castro Beeche, the Costa Rican minister, announced yesterday a three-year plan had been submitted to the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council for resumption of interest payments on $7,131,720 of dollar bonds held by United States investors.

The minister disclosed the Central American republic had offered to purchase interest coupons maturing from 1939 through 1941 at 30 per cent of face value. Past due unpaid coupons, he said, would be purchased at a rate equal to 1 per cent interest on bonds from which the coupons were detached.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

the foreign office and stayed for an hour exchanging information.

Despite the obvious fact that the United States is being sounded out by Britain as to an expansion of her "parallel action," Whitehall is shy about admitting it and London diplomatic correspondents were told:

"The United States has been kept fully informed of the events of the last week and of British reactions to them, but her position is recognized as being peculiar, and it is felt that it is better not even to appear to attempt to entangle her in European troubles at present."

Soviet Urges Parley

The immediate summoning of a conference representative of every power, large or small, interested in halting German expansion in Europe, was formally proposed to the British government by the Russian Ambassador and was considered but not accepted by the cabinet which met at 10 Downing Street this morning.

This is the second time the Soviet government has offered such a proposal. The first occasion was a year ago when Hitler annexed Austria and it was then cold-shouldered by Chamberlain who wanted to "appease" Hitler in his own way.

In the last week Chamberlain has swung around to the conclusion that Germany is Britain's real enemy and that Russia might be a useful ally. Once the forgotten man, Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambasador, has enjoyed more interviews with Lord Halifax in the last few days than in the previous six months. Today they met twice.

See Need for Speed

The Russians are proposing a London conference of the foreign ministers of Britain, France, Russia, Poland, Rumania and the states of the Balkan Entente, and possibly the Scandinavian countries. The British object that time is too short for a full dress conference and that it would be unwise to strip the European capitals of their foreign ministers at a time when Hitler might try to take over one or more of those countries.

The British prefer to make their soundings through the usual diplomatic channels. So far they have sounded out the United States, the British Dominions and nearly every country in Europe—important exceptions being Italy and Hungary.

What British diplomacy is striving for at the moment is an anti-aggression declaration to which all European powers, opposed to Germany's annexation of Czecho-Slovakia, are being invited to subscribe. Whitehall hopes to be able to publish such a declaration to the world this week, with France and Russia as her principal co-signers. Forecasts are that the statement will imply, if it does not state precisely, mutual support for any power which is attacked.

This would be a new form of collective security to replace the League of Nations, and its system of sanctions which failed to save Ethiopia.

The busiest man in London was Lord Halifax. His callers at the foreign office, in addition to those already named, were Sir Nevile Henderson, British ambassador recalled from Berlin; Sir Eric Phipps, British ambassador home from Paris; Charles Corbin, the French ambassador, and diplomatic representatives of Poland, Spain and Germany. Lord Halifax also found time to visit King George VI at Buckingham Palace.

At No. 10 the prime minister consulted Maj. Clement R. Attlee and Arthur Greenwood, Labor Party leaders, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader.

Commons Cheers Chamberlain

Chamberlain was smoking a cigar and thinking hard as he left No. 10 for the House of Commons. He was cheered by the usual crisis crowd of spectators gathered in Downing Street to witness the comings and goings of the statesmen.

The Prime Minister was cheered again when he rose in the Commons to make a statement. He said his government was devoting "urgent attention" to the European situation and was in communication with "other governments"—he declined to say how many. The whole situation, he explained, was "under review."

Canada to Back Britain

Ottawa, Ont., March 20 (Canadian Press).—Prime Minister MacKenzie King today indicated Canada would go to Britain's aid in the event she were threatened by aggression, but did not commit himself in any other kind of conflict.

"I have no doubt what the decision of the Canadian people and parliament would be," he told Commons, in condemning Germany's coup in Czecho-Slovakia.

"We would regard it as an act of aggression menacing freedom in all parts of the British Commonwealth."

Rumania

first move on Rumania's part in "more or less" entering the orbit of German influence as result of Hitler's seizure of Czecho-Slovakia.

Great Britain and France have been informed that Rumania is reconciled to closer collaboration with Germany because of the "difficult position" in which she has been placed by the Czecho-Slovak developments and the menacing situation along the Hungarian frontier.

The Soviet negotiations, understood to be virtually concluded, provide for an exchange of Rumanian breeding cattle, hogs, hides and leather against Russian-manufactured products such as tractors and motor trucks.

Germany herself has been desirous of selling manufactured products to Rumania in exchange for Rumania's oil and grain.

British Princesses' First Speeches to Be in French

London, March 20 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose will make the first speeches of their careers—in French—when they formally address Madame Lebrun during her visit with President Albert Lebrun of France to King George VI and Queen Elizabeth. Princess Elizabeth, 12, heiress presumptive to the British throne, wrote most of her speech herself.

Big Hungarian Army Reported Facing Carol

300,000 Said to Be Massed; Budapest Denies Plan to Attack

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, March 20.—More than half of Hungary's 600,000 armed forces were understood tonight to be stationed along the Rumanian frontier, and in Carpatho-Ukraine near that frontier.

The Hungarian explanation was that a majority of the troops were in Carpatho-Ukraine as a consequence of Hungary's annexation of this former Czecho-Slovak territory. The others were said to be strung along the 250-mile frontier running from Carpatho-Ukraine southward to Yugoslavia.

Others to Be Called

In addition to these legions under arms, it was reported reliably that a large number of additional men would be called to the colors in the next few days.

Hungarian official quarters denied that any military move was contemplated against Rumania. They said the troops were at the Rumanian frontier only for "defense purposes" and as a "precaution."

Beyond this frontier are 1,200,000 Magyars living in Rumania who Hungarian revisionists have declared must be restored to the fatherland.

The number of men which can be efficiently absorbed by the Hungarian army is limited by the equipment at hand.

Trianon Pact Abrogated

(The Little Entente—Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia—last August 23 agreed to abrogate the arms restrictions imposed by the post-war Treaty of Trianon which limited Hungary's army to 35,000).

Should Hungary's available equipment be increased by supplies from Germany, foreign military observers commented, the way might be open for placing a great part of Hungary's manpower under arms.

Moscow Calm As Nazis Near Russian Line

Soviet Ready to Defend Frontiers, in Alliance or Alone

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 20.—Although the Nazi steamroller advanced last week to within several hundred miles of the Soviet Russian border, Moscow has remained as usual one of the calmest capitals in the world.

Soviet citizens learned last night their government had refused to recognize Reichsfuehrer Hitler's absorption of Czecho-Slovakia and had condemned it as "arbitrary, violent and aggressive." There was no hint of panic at the near approach of German troops.

It is against this background of calm confidence in Moscow that the chances of Soviet co-operation with the western democracies must be considered.

Soviet Expansion Predicted

Vice Defense Commissar L. Z. Mekhli's prediction was recalled as especially significant today. In a recent speech he said any attempt to invade Soviet Russia would result only in "multiplying the number of Soviet Republics," and added:

"Comrades, the time is not far off when our armies—international because of the ideology which dominates them—answering insolent enemy attacks, will help the workers of the aggressor countries to throw off the Fascist yoke, free them from the capitalists and liquidate capitalist surroundings."

In other words, the Soviet Union has no objection to co-operating with other countries against an aggressor. But if the Soviet Union has to fight single-handed against an aggressor, then so much the worse for the aggressor and the principles he represents.

Diplomats Busy

Despite outward calm there was much diplomatic activity. A footnote to the situation was given by the big masquarade ball of Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso. There were colorful costumes, champagne, gaiety—and furtive conversations among diplomats in every secluded corner.

Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff did the Lambeth walk with the rest of the crowd. Shortly afterward he went into one huddle after another with various envoys. Once an attache of the German embassy appeared waving a document and asking, "Where is the ambassador?" Thereupon the ambassador and his gaily costumed staff retired to a cloakroom for a conference.

A Russian note to Germany yesterday—following similar action by the British and French governments—asserted that "in the absence of any expression of the will of the Czech people, the occupation of Czechia (Bohemia-Moravia) by German troops and subsequent actions of the German government cannot but be considered as arbitrary, violent and aggressive."

Slovak Seizure Denounced

The note added that "the above remarks also refer in their entirety to the change in the status of Slovakia, subordinating the latter to the German Empire, which was not justified by any expression of the will of the Slovak people" and that "far from eliminating any danger to universal peare (the actions) have, on the contrary, created and enbanced this danger . . . and dealt a fresh blow to the security of peoples."

For years the Soviet public has been remided constantly that the Soviet Union must be prepared always for attempts to invade its territory.

But the Soviet press never has cast the slightest doubt of the country's ability to defend itself and its principles single-handed.

Hitler Capitalizes On Self Determination

Empire-Building Program Develops Strange Paradox

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 20.—Hitler's empire-building progress is developing an amazing paradox which would be unbelievable if it didn't hit one right in the face.

In imposing his domination over small countries the fuehrer is coolly putting reverse English on Woodrow Wilson's famous ideal of self-determination for minorities, and is turning it to his own advantage.

Hitler's triumph at Munich, and his annexation of the big German population in Czecho-Slovakia's Sudetenland last fall, has stirred all the other minorities of eastern Europe and the Balkans into renewed activity.

These little folk are dashing about full of fresh hope from the Baltic to the Black Sea. There isn't a country in all that vast reach of the continent which hasn't its minority problem.

International Shell Game

Some of the insurgents want to be wholly independent, and others wish to return to the nation from which they sprung. Eternal hope makes each one of them believe it can guess under which shell the pea is concealed.

Some observers find it difficult to imagine any minority trouble in Hitler's present zone of operations which wouldn't benefit the Reich directly or indirectly.

Let's take just a quick peek at a few of the minority troubles and the manner in which Herr Hitler is profiting or likley to profit.

The Nazi leader paved the way for taking over the Sudetenland by encouraging the revolt of the German population of that district against the Prague government.

Last week the desire of Slovakia and Ruthenia to be independent of the Czecho-Slovak government, and thus be freed of Czech influence, boiled up in such a manner as to permit Hitler to dismember the entire republic and take over control.

Ports Nazified

Slovakia and Ruthenia got free of Prague all right but popped straight into der fuehrer's gamebag—Slovakia directly and Ruthenia through the agency of Hungary, which generally is understood to have annexed this little dab of the Carpathians with Hitler's blessing.

Up north the important Baltic ports of Memel and Danzig, which were lost by Germany in the World War, are so thoroughly Nazified that Europe is surprised they haven't been taken over by Berlin already. In this instance, both these districts want to get back into the Fatherland.

Poland, Rumania, Hungary, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria all have German minorities—maybe 3,000,000 all told, in addition to other minorities. In some instances these German colonies are very active in the interests of the Reich. They are a great help to Hitler in his "drive to the east."

Perhaps the most uncomfortable from this standpoint is Yugoslavia, which bulges like the plump merchant of Bagdad with war gains.

It is here that one of the biggest minorities is in action—the Croats, who long have been demanding absolute independence. These fiercely independent people total 3,000,000 out of the Yugoslav population of 14,000,000.

Bitter hostility between the Croats and the dominant Serbs (both of the Slavic race), compelled the late King Alexander in 1929 to impose a dictatorship, since party government had ceased to function, and this lasted until 1931.

Croat opposition to the government caused the downfall of the cabinet of Premier Milan Stoyadinovich recently.

Now the Croats, perhaps hoping that the Hitlerian campaign may in some way strengthen their hand, are pushing their demand for independence. That is a position which will cause no distress in Berlin. That is important, for Yugoslavia is called the keystone of the Balkans because of her geographical position and her strength.

The society went on record to honor the new Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope, after the Easter holidays and to sponsor a dance recital for Vytautas Beliajus, Lithuanian dancer.

U. S. May Penalize Japan for Trade Barriers in China

The Administration may invoke trade penalities against Japan similar to those applied Saturday against German goods, but not until the present European crisis has abated, a usually reliable government official said last night.

The penalties would be applied only against areas in China which have fallen to Japan through conquest.

The State Department on October 6 enumerated Japanese discriminations in North China areas including imposition of prohibitive tariffs, manipulation of the currency, and regulations which virtually excluded other powers from that market.

Government economists have held the President is authorized to "specify or declare new or additional duties upon articles wholly, or in part, product of a foreign country when he shall find such country imposes directly or indirectly, on any United States article, unreasonable charge or exaction or regulation not equally enforced upon like articles of every foreign country."

French Troops Stoned as They Police Syria

Rioters Fired On; Military Occupation Called Temporary

By the Associated Press.

Damascus, Syria, March 20.—French troops moved into the streets of Syria's disorder-torn cities today under an order from Paris to take all police powers from the Syrian government.

Demonstrators in Damascus stoned the troops as they marched into the bazaar quarter, but order soon was restored. Soldiers were placed at strategic centers and before all government buildings.

The military occupation followed upon renewed rioting by Syrians angered over France's failure to ratify the 1936 treaty, giving full independence to Syria, which is an autonomous state under French mandate.

In Damascus mobs attacked Syrian police and the police opened fire. There was an undetermined number of dead and wounded among the rioters.

Gabriel Puaux, French high commissioner, notified the Syrian president, Hashem Bek El Attassy, that the French military occupation would be only temporary.

$159,543,905 Interior Supply Bill Passes House

The $159,543,905 Interior Department supply bill was passed by the House and sent to the Senate yesterday after defeat of a move to curb activities of the United States Housing Authority in the low-cost field.

Reversing itself on action last week to limit cost of housing projects financed by the Authority to $3,500 per family dwelling unit, the House struck out the amendment. It thus restored the existing limitation of $5,000 for large cities and $4,000 for small.

Democrats overrode 213 to 123 a Republican effort to slash the total by 10 per cent.

Truck Drivers Strike in 3 States; 11 Pickets Seized

Providence, R. I., March 20 (AP).—Interstate shipping was halted at three points today by striking truck drivers as Gov. Vanderbilt took command of efforts to end a walkout affecting truckmen in Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Eleven pickets, who, police reported, stopped two trucks, were seized after the trucks had been turned back. Six were released later and the others were held for questioning.

The Governor conferred with both sides today but no progress was reported. The operators' committee for the area involved in the dispute will meet here tomorrow.

1,500 Convicts On Hunger Strike

San Quentin Prison, Calif., March 20—Fifteen hundred prisoners went on a "hunger strike" tonight, refusing to enter the mess hall for supper.

When the supper call came, they gathered in one corner of the recreation yard and booed the rest of the prison's 5,000 convicts who trooped to the mess hall as usual.

Warden Court Smith ordered them locked up for the night immediately and they went to their cells without resistance.

Wife and Neighbor Held in Dynamite Death of NYA Aide

Cave In Rock, Ill., March 20 (AP).—A man and woman were held tonight in the Hardin County Jail charged with murder after the dynamite explosion death of Earl Austin, 46-year-old county NYA superintendent.

Police said the prisoners were Mrs. Alice Austin, 35, the victim's estranged wife, and Theodore Simmons, 30, her neighbor.

Austin died at noon, five hours after dynamite exploded beneath the floorboards of his truck. A woman companion, Miss Lucine McDowell, 19, was recovering in a hospital at Elizabethtown after her left leg, mangled in the blast, had been amputated.

2 Russians Get 10 Years for Spying in U.S.

Gorin Receives 6, Salich 4 Years; Each Fined $10,000

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 20.—Two Russians, one a naturalized American, who were convicted of espionage today were sentenced to terms in a Federal penitentiary, fined $10,000 each and reminded of further penalties when they complete their sentences.

Michael Gorin, in this country as Pacific Coast manager of a Soviet travel agency, was sentenced to serve six years and told by Federal Judge Jenney that he will be deported to his own country as an undesirable alien "and be required to remain forever outside the boundaries of the United States."

Hafis Salich, who was born in Russia and who, it was charged, obtained naval information in his position as an intelligence officer which he sold to Gorin, was given four years, but the court reminded him:

"You may remain in this country and through your disgrace will then be punished far beyond the mere serving of your penitentiary term."

Judge Jenney denied a motion for a new trial.

Defense counsel served oral notice of appeal.

of the United States have traveled separate roads since the winter of 1937. Reports have it that the Vice President became so incensed over the Administration's handling of the sit-down strike situation that he quit Washington and returned to Uvalde for a six-month vacation. Since his return, his opinions have been at variance with the President's as to the path being taken by the Democratic Party.

"Garner is a party man, and seeing a return to conservatism as evidenced by the election results of last fall, he is reported to have requested frequently that the Administration sense the trend and bring the Democratic Party into a more conservative alignment.

"As to the results thus far and the future attainments of the conservative element as opposed to the New Deal, I do not feel qualified to voice an opinion. This much, however, is certain, John Garner is in the driver's seat right now, well in the lead as a likely Democratic candidate for the Presidency in the 1940 elections."

Ickes Queried On Apartment As War Office

House Group Asks Data; Pan American Union Annex Opposed

The House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee yesterday called on Secretary Ickes to furnish data on the safety of Corcoran Courts, apartment building at Twenty-third and D streets northwest, which is to be occupied next month by War Department units.

Representatives Crawford and Shafer (Republicans), of Michigan, urged that Congress investigate the conversion of residential buildings into Government offices. Shafer said he had been informed apartment houses are constructed to hold 40 to 50 pounds weight per square inch floor space, whereas office buildings are required to hold 70 pounds.

The committee was urged by the Interior Department yesterday to repeal an act authorizing the Pan American Union to construct an annex office building on a triangular tract at Constitution avenue, just in front of the new Interior Building, on the ground it would interfere with the view of the Interior Building from Constitution avenue and violate the policy established in construction of other buildings along Constitution avenue.

By the Associated Press.

Money Gifts Forced on Him, Says Stinson

Bank Attache Tells Of $32,150 Deposits To Husband's Account

Witnesses for Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson, plump and prosperous 54-year-old poetess, testified before Justice Luhring that 1937 was a happy year for 56-year-old Joseph Whitlaw Stinson, whom she charges with drugging her and marrying her for her money.

The happiness, L. P. Riddle, of the American Security & Trust Co., said, figured to $32,150, which Stinson deposited in his personal bank account between April 9 and November 1, 1937. Mrs. Stinson claims that it was that February that Stinson—engineer, lawyer, artist and would-be author—made her acquaintance and started a high-pressure courtship.

Stinson says she did the courting and forced the money on him.

The deposits, Riddle said, included a $1,000 check dated the same day in September that Mrs. Stinson claims she was an unwilling bride in Bar Harbor, Me., and $27,000 he received as a cash settlement when they parted. His lawyers have said he only wanted to borrow the money.

Mrs. Stinson is suing to get the money back and her marriage annulled. Her cook, butler and several friends were other witnesses yesterday.

Newspaper Strike In Pa. Near End

New York, March 20 (AP).—John L. Lewis announced tonight a tentative agreement, subject to approval by the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Newspaper Guild unit, to end a 5½-months-old strike on three Wilkes-Barre newspapers that suspended publication last October.

The agreement was concluded after four days of closeted discussions here. Terms were not disclosed by Lewis, who acted as adviser for the negotiators.

Murphy Asks Law to Catch Crooks FBI Has Driven to Sea

Attorney General Murphy yesterday recommended legislation to protect passengers on American ocean liners from "sharks"—former gangland gunmen, "stick-up guys," bank robbers and big-time bootleggers who have become card sharks and make their homes on the waves.

Immaculately dressed, well-mannered graduates of underworld dives, the Justice Department said, now enjoy virtual "immunity on the bounty," and have been having an easy time of it, fleecing ship passengers.

The drive against gangsters in recent years by G-Men and State and municipal authorities, the Department said, has caused a large number to lay aside safe-cracking tools, submachine guns and taped blackjacks and book passage on ships for prolonged vacations.

The department is receiving complaints. Criminal statutes, enacted under the power to punish "piracies and felonies committed on the high seas," however, do not reach them adequately. Murphy asked authority to prosecute persons obtaining money under false pretenses on American vessels.

Crooked gambling aboard special gambling vessels off the southern California coast outside the 3-mile limit also would be punishable under the proposed bill. These gambling ships, which operate "taxi boats" to and from shore, are a problem peculiar to that part of the country.

Aboard luxurious liners, the department said, the card shark, after becoming acquainted with a passenger, invites him to a stateroom for a game.

There is a case on record where a wealthy ocean traveler who was dealt a "Mississippi heart hand" lost $20,000 on it, although the stakes were only 5 cents a point. The rules waived, his bid of seven hearts was doubled and redoubled 14 times.

The holder of a "Mississippi heart hand" is dealt the six top hearts, the three top clubs and the four top diamonds. A confederate of the dealer is dealth the seven low hearts and the six federate of the dealer is dealt heart hand, of course, does not take a single trick.

Representative William D. Byron (Democrat) of the Sixth Maryland District, lauded President Rosevelt's foreign policy and approved sale of planes to foreign countries "to keep our factories prepared if we should have to use tehm."

The women elected Mrs. Byron as honorary member of the club. Mrs. Charles C. Ailes, program chairman for the county Democratic women's organization, revealed that Mrs. Roosevelt would receive 300 county leaders at a fete in May. Veto Proviso Delays Vote on Merger Bill

Offices

gress, I will fight that sort of thing, regardless of whether I am charged with not trusting the President of the United States."

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, contended no Government reorganization bill is necessary, that Congress is capable of reorganizing the Government through its own legislative committees. But if the President is to be given reorganization powers, Tydings insisted they be checked by the Wheeler amendment, requiring specific approval of both Houses within 20 days before any merger plan becomes law.

"No Great Emergency"

"Why should Congress abdicate?" declared Tydings. "There is no great emergency. The German army is not at Bladensburg . . . Where is the emergency that we should take our legislative power and hand it over to the President?"

Tydings charged that transfer of legislative powers to executive agencies is "one of the great causes of unrest in this country" and is in effect "creating a fourth branch of our National Government.

"As I have observed the workings of these legislative administrative agencies, they not only fill the country with uncertainty, but they allow a single man, not elected by the people, not a member of either House of Congress, in effect to pass laws in the name of Congress."

Meanwhile the Senate approved, without a murmur of dissent, a modified "economy" declaration by Senator Byrd, (Democrat), of Virginia, who insisted economy be made one of the major objectives of any merger program. Byrd called it "the first declaration for economy and retrenchment in Government which has been made by Congress since March, 1933."

Byrd Amendment Accepted

The Byrd amendment, which was accepted by Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, (who is handling the bill), after changes in phraseology, reads:

"The Congress hereby declares that by reason of continued national deficits beginning in 1931 it is desirable to reduce substantially Government expenditures and that such reduction may be accomplished in some measure by proceeding immediately under the provisions of this act."

Two other amendments were "accepted" by Byrnes, when a lengthy fight threatened—adding the Employes' Compensation Commission and the Tariff Commission to the list of agencies exempted from any reorganization. The American Federation of Labor had urged exemption of the former, and both were given immunity in the House version of the bill.

But the Senate shouted down an amendment by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio to exempt the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

Taft had brought down the fury of Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, Federal Reserve act "father," when he said the two agencies were due the same consideration as the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system, which is on the exempt list. Glass said the Reserve system "doesn't cost the Government a penny," and derided any comparison with the Home Loan Bank setup. Byrnes followed this with a charge that telegrams from building and loan associations are behind the attempt to exempt the Home Loan Bank board.

Close Vote Expected Today

A close vote on the Wheeler amendment is expected some time today. The Montanan pointed out that under the House veto method reorganization plans may become law over the disapproval of one House, while his amendment requires affirmative action by both bodies. The House provision under fire from Wheeler, Tydings, Byrd and others permits merger plans to take effect in 60 days unless a majority of both Houses vote "No." Disapproval by one House would not stop them.

"While we are condemning authoritarian states we are adopting the methods which we condemn," Tydings told the Senate in his attack on this proviso. "'We are shooting democracy to death right here in the Senate by writing on the statute books that we are incompetent to legislate. Bit by bit we are surrendering all of our legislative powers."

Last night, the Douglases had dinner with Mrs. Bruce Smith at the Mayflower and then went to the theater.

"It's a pretty bad night to be going where there are so many people. Perhaps it might have been better if this had been a night in," Mrs. Douglas declared, and then she remembered things were to be no different, and smiled.

heatedly asserted he would make up his own mind how to vote.

Then, witnesses said, Ozmun warned the Representative that "we'll remember that at the next election." (Other witnesses declared that Ozmun merely stated, "I'll have to report this back to the office.")

Cox thereupon slapped Ozmun's face, with the retort, "You'll remember this, too." One observer commented later that "it wasn't any love tap, either."

400,000 April Cut Set

David Lasser, president of the Workers' Alliance, stated last night that "the whole incident is regrettable." The main purpose of delegates to the "All-Southern" Conference of the Alliance, Lasser said, "is to make sure that the votes of the Southern Congressmen do not defeat the voting of additional WPA funds and therefore make necessary the discharge of more than 1,250,000 WPA workers throughout the Nation."

Lasser announced last night that 3,000,000 ballots were being sent to WPA workers to decide whether there should be a "march on Washington."

Meanwhile, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA Administrator, issued instructions yesterday for dropping 400,000 persons from the relief rolls in the week of April 3, unless Congress accepts President Roosevelt's recommendation that $150,000,000 (in addition to $725,000,000 voted in February) be appropriated to carry the WPA through the rest of the fiscal year.

$50,000,000 Cut Seen

Although no sum has been definitely decided upon, it appeared increasingly likely yesterday that the tug of war between members of the sub-comittee desiring to follow the President and those in favor of a drastic WPA cut would end with a recommendation for $100,000,000. Hearings will be closed today and the sub-committee will vote tomorrow morning.

An "economy" member of the sub-committee said yesterday, "We wanted hearings on the bill, and we got them; we wanted a cut in the appropriation, and we'll get that, too." It was thought probable the full committee will accept the sub-committee's figure.

If the bill is reported out with the expected reduction, it is likely that a bitter fight will develop on the floor of the House. Some observers thought yesterday that Republicans coupled with Southern Democrats could muster sufficient strength to retain the slash. Most of the urban and industrial representatives, on the other hand, will favor the full appropriation.

A surprise witness at yesterday's sub-committee hearings was Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, who presented his objections to the New York production of the WPA "Swing Mikado."

D. C. Quota Cut 1,800

Col. Harrington, present at both morning and afternoon sessions of the sub-committee, was questioned on administrative expenditures of WPA, especially in respect to alleged salary increases of some officials, travel allowances and telephone bills. Mrs. Florence Kerr, head of the Federal Theater project, also testified.

One member of the sub-committee declared after the hearings that he thought "if the President had known all the facts he would not have recommended a figure as high as $150,000,000."

In announcing the projected cut in WPA rolls, Col. Harrington said the District of Columbia quota would be reduced in April by 1,800 workers to a total of 10,000. The April quota for Maryland will be 13,000, a reduction of 2,000 from March, and the Virginia total will be slashed by 4,800 to 25,200. These cuts will, of course, be much smaller if Congress approves the $150,000,000 request.

Douglas Named To High Court By Roosevelt

with "death sentence" provisions of the holding company act.

Born to comparative poverty, the son of a Presbyterian missionary, his swift assent up the ladder of success reads like the subtitle of a Horatio Alger novel. Not since President Madison sent the name of the 32-year-old Story to the Senate on November 15, 1811, has so young a justice been named to the Supreme bench.

Only from Senators west of the Mississippi, who have urged appointment of justices from that section since retirement of Justices Sutherland and VanDevanter, came even mild protest, and here feelings had been tempered by the persuasive voice of Borah, a stanch admirer of the young nominee.

Adams Comments

Typical of Western objections was the comment by Adams:

"Of course there is no constitutional requirement that the President appoint a man from the West," said the Colorado Democrat, "but naturally some of us are disappointed. There are legal questions peculiar to the West—mining, water rights and public lands problems. We feel a man closely informed on these matters should be placed on the court, but I have no personal objections to Douglas, and I expect to vote for him."

McCarran, sharing this view, said he would "go along," but thought the West should have been represented.

Burke said he did not regard the geographic question as "paramount" and declared Douglas "will make a very able judge."

Minority Leader McNary not only indorsed the appointment but predicted swift confirmation.

The story of young Douglas' amazing "Sink or Swim" or "Rags to Riches" career has become legend in Washington—of his box-car ride to New York in 1922—of the correspondence law text he wrote to pay his way through Columbia law school.

Arrived With 6 Cents

He is said to have arrived in New York with 6 cents in his pocket after a rough transcontinental trip on the brakerods. Douglas' friends say he actually worked his way to Chicago on a cattle train, but rode into New York in style after wiring ahead to a relative for $15. He arrived there with only 6 cents and an ambition to study law at Columbia.

But hardship was an old story to Douglas. By selling papers, running a junk shop and spraying and pruning fruit trees in his spare time, he worked his way through grade and high school and contributed to his widowed mother's support.

With his savings at the age of 18, he purchased a second-hand bicycle, wrapped up an extra shirt, and pedaled his way to Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash., where a year's free tuition was promised. A pitched tent solved his housing problem, and he earned enough money to eat by swinging a janitor's broom at 15 cents an hour.

He found time in between to serve on the debating team. And when he graduated in 1920 he sported a Phi Beta Kappa key. Then came a futile try for a Rhodes scholarship, and his return to Yakima, Wash., to teach English and Latin in the local high school at $1,300 a year.

Two years later, with only $50 saved, he headed east to New York and a cherished law course at Columbia University. But you can't camp in a tent on the Columbia campus, and Douglas soon found himself faced with a $600 unpaid dormitory bill and threatened expulsion. He solved this one by contracting to write a correspondence course in law. When his price was asked he named the amount of his unpaid bill—$600. Through odd jobs at tutoring and editing a law review, he finished his Columbia studies with a bank balance of $1,000. Douglas "blew" it all on another trip West to marry a colleague of his high school teaching days in Yakima. And when he returned to New York he had a bride and jingling in his pocket was exactly 30 cents.

Joins Law Firm

This time, Douglas walked into the office of a prominent corporation law firm, asked for a job, and got it. He was there for two years before he decided he was not sufficiently enamoured of his clientele to remain. So Douglas left the Manhattan firm of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood for a full time teaching job on the Columbia faculty. Next came a teaching offer from Yale. Later, happily ensconced in the chair of commercial and corporation law at New Haven, he spurned a $20,000 offer from President Bob Hutchins to teach law at the University of Chicago. Hutchins called him "the Nation's outstanding professor of law."

But when public service called, in the person of Chairman Joseph B. Kennedy, of the SEC (now Ambassador to England), Douglas took brief leave from Yale and from February, 1935, to January, 1936, he plowed through records of 200,000 protective committees, involving an investors' stake of $36,000,000,000. His analysis and report won him the admiration of the President and Mr. Kennedy and an appointment to succeed the latter on the SEC when Kennedy resigned. And when Chairman James M. Landis returned to Harvard as law dean, "Bill" Douglas job his job as SEC chairman.

Wall street learned Douglas was a man to be respected when the youthful chairman intervened to force a slow but thorough reorganization of the New York Stock Exchange after former President Whitney was convicted for embezzlement. His two years corporation law experience enabled him to solve many of the differences between the Government and the exchange, the SEC and the large public utility companies without "crack down" tactics.

Never considered a liberal of the extreme, left, certainly not a conservative rightist, Mr. Douglas says he believes in "conservative standards of finance—no monkey business" and "a free market, not a fixed market." His SEC battle has been for investors, whom he calls "the orphans of our financial economy."

Constructive Economy

Widespread resentment has been aroused in Congressional circles by the sidetracking of Representative Woodrum, acting chairman of the sub-committee on deficiency appropriations, who was penalized for opposing immediate action on the President's request for an additional $150,000,000 relief appropriation. However, the effort to speed the relief bill by such means appears to have crystallized sentiment in favor of a searching probe into the WPA.

At this juncture, it is very difficult for Congress to resist the President's demands for more WPA money, especially as the authorities are disposed to use the whip hand in an endeavor to force compliance. Confronted by threats of wholesale dismissals of relief workers and handicapped by lack of knowledge as to how and where savings could be effected in other ways, Congress cannot put up a very effective fight against the spenders.

Undoubtedly a systematic probe of the WPA would reveal countless ways in which money could be saved. It would expose the fundamental weaknesses of the present system and enable Congress to devise substitute plans to take its place. With that purpose in mind Senator Vandenberg has introduced a bill that would permit the WPA to continue spending at the current rate until the first of June. In the intervening period, with the controversy over the $150,000,000 deficiency relief bill in abeyance, Congress could turn its attention to the much more important matter of the relief outlay for the coming fiscal year.

Unless Congress settles down to study the relief problem as a whole, with a view to effecting basic reforms in the method of administering relief, we shall undoubtedly witness a prolonged and inconclusive struggle between those who wish to retrench and those who doggedly resist economy on the ground that it would aggravate the misery of the unemployed. There can never be a satisfactory solution of such conflicts if Congress permits itself to be swayed by what Representative Woodrum calls "emotion and melodramatic appeals," instead of insisting upon a factual approach to the relief problem. As Gen. Hugh Johnson has pointed out, Congress should make up its mind how much the Government can afford to spend for relief purposes. Then it should ask how that money can be spent to secure the best results with a minimum of waste.

The economy advocates have had all the worst of it so far because they have not been prepared to offer a constructive alternative relief program. From present indications Congress is in a mood to apply itself to this laborious but rewarding task. Therein lies the only hope for really substantial reductions in Government expenditures that would end deficit financing and retard the drift toward national bankruptcy.

Mr. Justice Douglas

President Roosevelt's nomination of William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, as associate justice of the Supreme Court, will meet with very general approval.

It is of minor moment that the nomination to some extent disregards the geographical considerations which have been urged on the President in filling this vacancy. Mr. Douglas has not been a resident of the West, at present unrepresented on the tribunal, for some years. Nor does he possess extensive legal experience in matters peculiar to that section, such as water rights and mining rights. But the volume of litigation with regard to such problems is very much less than was once the case and through his birth in Minnesota and his early years in the State of Washington Mr. Douglas has a fully adequate understanding of Western attitudes.

What is of infinitely greater importance than purely regional considerations is that Mr. Douglas is a man of wide legal knowledge, strong character and great courage. His experience has been varied. He has been a practicing lawyer, a teacher of law and a student of business organization and finance. As chairman of the SEC he has demonstrated exceptional talents, rare administrative ability and an objective and judicial temperament.

At a time when the Supreme Court is increasingly confronted with a tremendous diversity of problems there is particular value in the addition of one who combines scholarly capacity with a practical administrative background. Only 40, Mr. Douglas promises to be one of the youngest men ever to be named to the tribunal. But if the brilliant records made by Joseph Story, appointed when he was 32, and by William Johnson, who was 33, are any criterion, the youth of the new appointee will prove an asset rather than a handicap.

Effective Conciliation

Settlement of Washington's complicated hotel strike on terms which appear to be mutually satisfactory is a real tribute to the conciliation service of the Department of Labor. Negotiations began under very unfavorable circumstances. Aside from the diverse viewpoints of the two sides, and the meager experience of both groups in collective bargaining, the negotiators were confronted by the highly controversial issue of the closed shop. To bring a constructive agreement out of this situation was a major achievement.

A real victory was won, but it is a victory for collective bargaining. Neither the employers nor the unions fully gained the points for which they were contending when the strike began. The settlement is a genuine compromise. What is more, it is an intelligent compromise that should improve the chances of smooth collective bargaining in the hotel industry.

The unions had argued for the closed shop. It is probably to their advantage, as well as to the advantage of the employers, that the agreement stopped short of that concession. When employes of any type are forced to join a union against their will, the result is likely to be dissension instead of strength. Coercion on the part of unions is no more justifiable than coercion by employers.

On the other hand, a responsible type of collective bargaining can scarcely be anticipated if the union has always to fight for a bare existence. By the happy compromise reached in this case the union is strengthened without being allowed dictatorial powers. It is given full opportunity to function freely, to grow and to prove its worth. This is all that can be reasonably asked. It is all that is needed by alert, well-directed labor organizations to make collective bargaining successful. At the same time the arrangement seems to give the managements adequate security against possible arbitrary and irresponsible tactics on the part of the unions.

Fortunately, too, the labor side relinquished any claim to interfere with the direction of employes, with layoffs or discharges. In return the employers have pledged themselves not to discriminate against union members or leaders in making such changes. Management of the hotels is thus left exclusively to the hotel executives, and management of the unions to union leaders.

This sensible and discerning adjustment reveals the practiced hand of the Labor Department's conciliators. The solution worked out for the local hotel industry may not be applicable in other fields. But what is applicable is the moral that the most complicated industrial issues can be worked out to a constructive solution, given patience, goodwill and the guidance of skillful mediators.

The Cotton Dilemma

Cotton is giving the Administration one of the worst headaches it has had since Secretary Wallace began his crop-reduction and price-pegging methods. The tendency is for this painful symptom to become more rather than less acute. Every one agrees that something ought to be done. But the remedies thus far offered are either so costly or so contrary to sound principles of trade that they seem only to intensify the dilemma.

President Roosevelt had good reason to turn thumbs down upon the Smith bill. That measure favored by the Senate Agriculture Committee would meet the situation by opening the flood-gates of the Treasury to cotton growers. Farmers would receive liberal subsidies if they marketed cotton from this year's crop instead of obtaining Government loans. And the Treasury would take tremendous losses on the cotton it holds so as to induce farmers to reclaim this fiber and sell it instead of growing new cotton.

But the substitute plan which the Administration appears to favor holds perhaps even less promise of a reasonable solution. It is said to involve the selling of surplus American cotton abroad under stimulus of a subsidy. The urgent need of a policy that will permit cotton to flow freely to foreign markets once more is emphasized by the decline of 40 per cent in exports this season as compared with a year ago. There is grave danger that some of our lost cotton markets, particularly those in Great Britain, may be permanently supplied by other countries, unless genuine competition in prices is soon restored. Whether an attempt should be made to correct the situation by subsidies, however, is an entirely different question.

The Treasury has just imposed a 25 per cent penalty upon exports from Germany to this country on the ground that the Reich is dumping its products here with the aid of subsidies. In the face of that action, how could the Administration logically pay bounties to exporters disposing of American surplus cotton abroad? Such a contradiction in policy would probably intensify retaliation from other countries and raise questions as to our good faith in the minds of those governments with which we have negotiated reciprocal trade agreements.

Considering the impracticability of both these subsidy schemes, some one may be naive enough to suggest that the Administration should simply try a gradual elimination of the price-pegging policies which caused most of the difficulty in the first place.

Dangerous Diseases

Nothing demonstrates the magnitude of the present European crisis more vividly than the action of the French Parliament in placing dictatorial power in the hands of Premier Daladier, to be exercised by him for the next eight months, at least.

The French are a people proud of their hard-won liberties, democratic and individualistic to the core. Only dire necessity could compel their elected representatives to accept even temporarily a suspension of parliamentary government. But with Germany running amok in Central Europe, both Chamber and Senate have approved the Premier's assertion that "it is not possible by normal procedure to fight on an equal footing against states that have the advantage over us of absolute secrecy and rapidity of decision."

Premier Daladier is expected to use his greatly enhanced authority to put France in shape to meet any emergency. It is anticipated that he will at once call additional troops to the colors and will proceed to overhaul the French industrial machine so that, should the threatened catastrophe come, the republic will be able to defend itself successfully.

Of such a policy there can be no criticism, at the present juncture of affairs in Europe. The danger is, of course, that the present emergency may be used by the government, or by individuals and groups operating through the government, to fasten a reactionary regime on France.

One important assurance against such action is that Premier Daladier is himself a man deeply imbued with the liberal tradition, neither the military "man on horseback" nor the anti-democratic dictator type now dominating the European scene. There is reason to believe, therefore, that he will employ the vast power entrusted to him with meticulous care and restraint. But even so the precedent now set will hang like a sword of Damocles over the French nation.

The emergency powers which Chancellor Bruening used to save democracy in Germany, Hitler later employed to destroy it. The dictatorial authority now vested in Premier Daladier might, in the hands of a more personally ambitious individual, lead to the ultimate undoing of French democracy. But the awareness of threatening catastrophe has necessarily obscured long-run prospects.

The French, like other peoples on the present European firing line, are finding it necessary to fight fire with fire, to shelve democratic procedure so as to increase the probability of maintaining it when the emergency is over. The necessity of adopting dictatorial methods in order to check dictators is not the least tragic aspect of civilization's downward sweep.

Wisdom In Delay

By unanimous vote the Ways and Means Committee of the House has voted to defer action on a proposal to extend the provisions of the social security law to farm and domestic labor, as well as to employes of religious, charitable and non-profit institutions. Although inclusion of these groups was recommended by the Social Security Board, and indorsed by the President, the board has made it clear that there are numerous administrative difficulties involved in such an extension.

There is no questioning the desirability, indeed the justice, of extending the benefits of social insurance to all the Nation's workers as rapidly as possible. But it is not to anybody's advantage that reforms desirable in themselves should be introduced so hastily as to endanger administrative efficiency. No other country has launched an initial plan for social insurance on such an ambitious scale as has the United States. Elsewhere systems have been built up gradually as experience was acquired and as expansion was seen to be administratively feasible.

We have yet to test the efficiency of the agencies that have been established to administer our present system of old-age insurance. It seems wise, therefore, to concentrate effort upon making a success of this limited plan before attempting new tasks. These general arguments in favor of delay are strengthened by the fact that the seasonal, migratory and uncertain character of the work done by excluded groups makes it exceptionally difficult to check earnings and collect the pay roll levies required by the law.

"I don't quite understand my pictures," said Salvador Dali, painter of surrealistic pictures, "it's enough that I paint them." Enough, Salvador? It's entirely too much!

If taxation without representation is tyranny, what about the case of a child born in the United States today owing the Federal Government $303.15?

The Closed Shop

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the recent hotel strike had involved only the question of getting adequate wages or decent hours for the hotel workers, public sympathy would undoubtedly have been wholly with the strikers. But it appears that the real issue was the "closed shop."

We are told by Governmental agencies that modern machinery has reduced the number of jobs so that there are not enough to go round. Therefore, we find the organized workers saying in effect: "We demand these jobs for ourselves and insist that nonunion workers be denied employment." That seems to be about as heartless, brutal and unfair as anything ever charged against employers by the unions.

Of course, the unions will argue that the nonunion workers should join the union to help boost wages. Theoretically, that is sound argument, but practically the applicant for union membership finds that the unions have adopted rules limiting their membership, with the purpose of keeping all jobs for those in the unions and keeping others out.

Many unions have rules limiting the number of apprentices who may learn a trade, and such unions have long waiting lists of applicants made up of the sons, nephews and other relatives of the union members. Thus the union says to the poor devil not a member of the union: "We won't let you work because you are not a member of the union, and we won't let you join the union because our quota is full."

Under these circumstances, the general public is justified in setting its face against the whole closed shop idea. It is a form of pernicious racketeering which has no place in a country in which every man is supposed to have an equal chance. F. GIBSON.

American Trees

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note from the March 19 issue of the usually accurate Post that the District Commissioners, in re the Cherry Blossom Festival opening Friday, March 24, state "despite the removal of 18 cherry trees to make way for the Jefferson Memorial, there are more Japanese cherry trees than ever this year."

Can it be true that only 18 trees have been destroyed? Why all this argument and talk over this small number of trees, and all this cheap notoriety over the fair ladies chaining themselves to the trees to save them?

As to the Japanese cherry trees, no one denies they are beautiful, but they are equalled, if not surpassed, by good American trees, the dogwood and the crabapple. Give us more of them and less Japanese cherries. America first!

Allergic To Red

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an old fogey who has passed the age of 50 and therefore supposed, to be beyond the pale of usefulness, but who still thinks a beautiful woman, as God made her, is the most wonderful of His creations, I find myself wondering just what percentage the following rate in judging "beauty queens": (a) The name "Peggy," (b) long, bloody fingernails, (c) personality, (d) beauty of face and figure.

Those "queens" whose pictures I have seen, must be naturally lovely, but why paint the lily?

I also wonder if there be others who are allergic to ghastly, painted fingernails. NATURE LOVER.

Government And Religion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An Associated Press news report appearing on your first page on March 5 under the heading, in part, "God Save the State," said: "A rich, barytone 'God Save the King' was what radio listeners and at least part of his Congressional audience thought John Charles Thomas sang as the last line of 'America' when he appeared with Gladys Swarthout at yesterday's commemoration of the First Congress—but Thomas says it isn't so. What he really sang was 'God Save the State,' he declared."

Apparently this matter has disturbed many people who do not perceive a more serious impropriety involved. That was the intrusion of religion, of theology, the recognition and appeal to a Divinity in connection with the Government and a governmental affair. If a God is to be affirmed, recognized, and invoked as the protector and upholder of Government, it is much more appropriate that this be done in connection with "king," immemorially associated with "divine right," than in connection with a State which repudiated this doctrine at its foundation.

All religious, theological ideology and exercises in connection with Government are inconsistent with democracy and the separation of church and state and would never be heard of in connection with governmental affairs in this country if the basic principles of the Government of the United States relevant to the matter where properly understood, respected and observed. Test Of Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are we democracies going to be deceived into believing the worst is over and the things we hold dear are already saved? Shall we confuse our dreams with realities, or shall we survive as democracies?

The effort we put forth and the thing we accomplish will determine to an enormous extent the destiny of our world. If we turn over in bed for a second nap, democracy is already doomed for an age the end of which no one can see. But if we are capable of taking in the truth that an historic age has come to its end and things cannot possibly be as they were a few short years ago, but must remain in an extremely critical condition for a long time to come and that even if there be no world war we must keep ourselves 100 per cent alert—prepared for anything at any time—then democracy has a chance.

In any case, we are sure of very few things concerning our future. Our uncertainties have indeed reached a profound degree and daily call to us—call to the very depths of our souls—to awaken as never before and take hold of every opportunity to insure the survival of the things we hold most dear.

A Bill And A Bill Board

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I find myself with a dollar bill left over after all bills, taxes, Easter bonnets, etc., have been taken care of—and I can think of no better use for it than to suggest starting a fund to erect a billboard upon which to place a reproduction of the cartoon which appeared in The Post of March 18. I would, I think, leave off the tusks and call it plain hog—it seems to fit the circumstance better. It could be placed on top of a building for all to see where the Bundites could not destroy it, as they would undoubtedly do with the help of our world renowned Civil Liberties Committee.

The American Agreement With Brazil

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent accord with Brazil is clothed with singular significance. Its import emanates no less from the light it sheds on cardinal tendencies of present-day American foreign policy than from the delicate problems it engenders or forces to the fore.

To the keen student of post-Munich developments in the international arena, the accord just concluded provides a telling proof of the policy of the United States to consolidate and strengthen its position in the Western hemisphere. In a world where the precariousness of peace is rendered increasingly pronounced by international friction, by disrespect of law and pact, by insidious, subversive philosophies and by an armaments race unprecedented in scope and magnitude, the security of the vital interests of this country demands that its Government focus its efforts on a policy of close co-operation with its American neighbors.

At Lima sincere endeavors along this line were crowned with some success. Moral unity of the sister American republics, to a large measure, as manifested by the declarations of solidarity, has been achieved. But the will to render this hemisphere impervious to doctrines inimical to the preservation and propagation of those principles and institutions which are higaly and justly treasured by the 21 republics, and to pressure emanating from the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis, if it is to bring fruit, must of necessity be translated into practical, concrete measures. To such an era the Brazilian-American accord seems to afford a signal auxury

On the other hand, the nature of this pact, particularly its economic features, seems to lend color to the belief shared by the writer that the reciprocal trade agreements program is far from being potent to fulfill its purpose "of expanding foreign markets" for United States products in full.

In some cases concessions in the form of most-favored-nation treatment and/or duty bindings or reductions for American commodities seem to be of comparatively small real value in virtue of the limited purchasing power available or of its diversion, directly or indirectly, into channels scarcely benefiting American producers in normal times.

The fact stands out, nevertheless, that any financial assistance given to our neighbor in the south which will help promote her economic development and consequently increase her purchasing power will greatly augment her capacity to absorb American products, particularly industrial equipment. This will not only result in increased United States trade with Brazil, but it will help create in that country conditions highly inimical to the penetration and spread of totalitarian and communistic philosophies.

Probably part of the depression harassing our capital goods industries and the attendant unemployment can well be attributed to the tremendous decline in the flow of capital from the United States and other highly industrialized nations into economically less developed countries, that is characteristic of the early 1930's. Perhaps it is time to reverse the tide to the mutual benefit of all concerned, and especially to contribute, ultimately, to the creation of a strong commercial and financial structure in this hemisphere potent enough to give full force and effect to its declared solidarity.

No Coals To Newcastle

THE HOSTESS led George over to where the English girl sat in a low chair talking with a Frenchman. The girl was young and beautifully dressed, and she had a rich throaty voice with the kind of English accent American actresses strive for. She was attractive and George, looking at her, remembered that all English girls are supposed to be leatherish and untidy and wear only tweeds and brogues and talk only of sports and the weather and be dripping with moisture from the fogs off the moors and heaths.

He remembered this because he had just finished reading "With Malice Toward Some" and because, right there before hie eyes, was an English girl who violated all the rules. Until she spoke, she was as American as Yorkshire pudding is English. Then George heard her broad "a," and suddenly recalled the sun on the grass of St. James's Park, a street in the town of Warwick, Ann Hathaway's garden.

The Frenchman got up and, excusing himself, drifted over to another group. You know how it is before a dinner party goes in. George took the Frenchman's seat and began with the usual question.

Yes, she liked Washington very much. No, this was her second visit to America.

George felt they weren't getting on so well. Casually, he mentioned that he'd been to England, and after that there wasn't anything to it. He learned a lot about her. She declined a cigarette and she took tomato juice when the cocktails came. She'd gone to school in England and in Paris. She spoke French. She knew a great deal about English history and French history and even the history of Italy.

"And American history?" George asked.

"Nothing," she said frankly. "You see, we aren't taught it. Geographically and economically we have to know the history of Europe."

"What about American literature?"

"I'll be honest," she said. "I know nothing of it. In fact, I know nothing of America—except what I've actually seen."

George thought of the millions of British subjects without any opportunity of ever visiting America, and tried to imagine what their conception of it must be. No wonder people in Europe asked Americans visiting their countries if cowboys and Indians fought in our city streets, if all Chicagoans carry pistols when they go out of their houses, and if everybody in the South lives in a house like Tara. It's our fault, he thought. We send them our movies.

"But we study your history and your literature!" he said to the English girl.

"Of course," she said. "You have to—to learn your own. You can't help yourselves because ours has so strongly influenced yours. You're in the same position there that we are in relation to the principal countries on the Continent. Individually, we may not be interested, but we recognize a necessity when we see it. As for America—in my own case I like it very much. It isn't England out here, you know, but then I didn't expect that."

"Tell me," George said, "do you think there'll be a war?"

"Naturally, I don't know. But I don't think so. One hears endless talk of war—but—the English people have great faith in Mr. Chamberlain."

"Do you?"

"Oh, yes. I think he's wonderful. And if anyone in Europe today can ward it off, he can."

George put his glass on the butler's tray.

"This really isn't an interview," he said. "But do you think the Duchess of Windsor should be given the rank of a Royal Highness?"

"Certainly not."

"Why not?"

"Why should one curtsy to her?"

"I don't know," George said. "Why should one curtsy to anyone?"

"Royalty is different. I am surprised. I thought all Americans had a secret respect and longing for royalty."

"Do you think the King and Queen should come to the United States?"

"I think it's a very good idea. They want to visit Canada because Canada is a very important part of the British Empire, and certainly they should come to the United States. Why not?"

"Why not indeed?" George said. "I don't think there are any Americans who could express anything but gratification at having intelligent, educated foreigners visit the United States. We like them to take away correct impressions of us, the real facts about our country. Then when American history and American literature are studied in the schools of Europe, America will be better appreciated than I believe she is now."

The hostess and the guests rose. There was a twinkle in the English girl's eyes.

"What do you say we sing a little song as we go in—one tune—you the words to 'My Country, 'Tis of Thee' and I, 'God Save the King'?" PENDLETON HOGAN.

Appreciation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At a regular meeting of the board of directors of this Chamber of Commerce on March 13, 1939, it was unanimously voted to commend The Washington Post for its impartial, open-minded reporting of the events concerning the rezoning of a parcel of land located at Lee boulevard and Pershing drive to allow for the construction of a hotel. Considering the far reaching importance of the matter it is very gratifying to note that The Washington Post has presented both sides of the controversy in order for its readers to be correctly informed. Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

It's A Tough Job

FICTION WRITERS make big money at home, sometimes as much as $3,000 for a story, plus the movie rights which may be as much again. It would seem to be a soft way of making a luxurious living, for one story a month should suffice, and some highly successful fictioneers have made one story last a lifetime, merely writing it over and over, now in a Palm Beach setting, now in Hollywood, now on board a ship and now, for a change of pace, in the poor but honest surroundings of the 5-and-10.

But, although I can run a typewriter and know as many words as the next one and can think up the doings and sayings with little effort, fiction and its rich and easy rewards plainly are not for me because I find it impossible to write convincing description of pretty ladies.

"The beautiful oval of her face," I say, and then look at the words on paper and "X" them out and back into it like this: "Against the pale radiance of the moon the beautiful oval of her face—" Nope, ham! Fresh sheet of paper. Once more, now: "The deep pools of her eyes, illuminating the tender oval of her face—"

It gets worse and worse, and it does no good to play the duck for the beautiful oval of her face and start in on her finely chiseled throat the slender tendrils of her fingers or the tantalizing tilt of her chin because, eventually, you have to assemble her like a car on the line. You have got to select a certain kind of eyes big and round or mischievious crescents, and fit them alongside a certain type of nose and a small, petulant mouth (for society types) or a different kind for noble, self-sacrificing girls.

Task Takes Days And Days Of Toil

THAT IS another problem. You can't say she has a big mouth. It sounds funny. Like mush-mouth. It takes days and days of toil and hundreds of cigarettes to create a nice mouth which is not small, indicating a small, spoiled nature, nor yet an ear-to-ear mouth. Some fictioneers seem to just throw them together any old way and get good results, which may explain why prime fiction brings such high prices.

Then you still have to surround all these fixtures with an outline which, say what you will, has got to be a delicate or tender oval because, after all, if you give her a square face the editor is going to say, "Why, this doll is just an old hag," and bounce it right back at you. And this head being completed, including the hair—which, by the way, has a seductive fragrance and tickles deliciously against the man's cheek—has to be mounted on a nice chassis, and there you are in trouble again. Not tall, not runty, not fat, neither scrawny. Just right. You try describing just right and you will see.

I think the reason why fictioneering remains a highly specialized and profitable trade is that most men never stop to consider why a face is attractive to them and would find, if they did, that they go for faces which would sound awful on paper. They don't analyze a face, asking themselves, "Is this one oval?" or "are those eyes deep, mysterious pools of devotion?" but respond to a general effect and are much less exacting in real life than in the make-believe ladies who exist on the pages of the magazines. Otherwise the only girls who would get a play in this world and acquire loving husbands would be a few models, movie actresses and show girls.

It Sounds Easy, But Just Try It

A FICTIONEER must be completely free of self-consciousness and just let himself go in describing ladies and the wives of men sitting down to do this, would be likely to wonder if the completed product wouldn't seem to the neighbors to be a knock on mamma. It might suggest that a man had a secret dream-girl in his mind and make for distrust and unhappiness in his bower or give his old lady foolish ideas and set her to posturing the graceful column of her neck, including her double chins, against the pale light of the moon, or talking baby talk like the heroine of the story.

Men, too, are hard work because here again the standards are very high and the rules exacting. Firm chin, dancing eyes, tall, lithe, lean, clean-limbed with a certain springy eagerness in gait as though about to break into a run and with muscles rippling beneath the jacket or shirt or the honey-colored surface of his suntanned arms, this latter for rough diamonds such as oil drillers and engineers and for playboys on the beach of Nassau.

It sounds easy, but you try it, and when the postman drops the story back you will realize why fictioneers get up to $3,000 a story plus, in some cases, as much again for the movies.

Obstacles Arise In Oil Parley; Richberg to Leave

Mexico City, March 20 (AP). Donald Richberg, attorney for expropriated foreign oil companies, said tonight "practical difficulties and obstacles" had developed in efforts to reach a settlement with the Mexican government.

Because of the unexpected developments, Richberg said in a statement it "seemed to me fortunate" that engagements concerning other matters "compel me to return to Washington." The trip would permit him to discuss the case with those "most deeply concerned," he said. He will hold a final conference Wednesday with President Cardenas.

Giannini Aide Again Defies SEC Inquiry

Challenges Right to 'Inquisitorial Powers' In Transamerica Case

By International News Service.

Right of the Securities and Exchange Commission to "exert inquisitorial powers over situations which are completely unrelated to inquiries" was hotly contested yesterday by O. A. Stewart, president of the Pacific Coast Mortgage Co.

Recalled as witness in the Transamerica Corporation inquiry into charges officials had filed a false and misleading stock registration, Stewart refused to answer a categorical set of questions regarding A. P. Giannini, head of Transamerica.

Commission May Act

An SEC attorney, O. J. Rogge, interrogated Stewart as to whether Giannini had, in 1936, received $140,000 in dividends from the Pacific Coast Mortgage Co., former affiliate of Transamerica.

Stewart stubbornly answered a stream of nearly 50 questions on this subject, with the declaration:

"I refuse to answer on advice of counsel."

Finally, Rogge moved for adjournment and announced he would ask the remainder of his estimated 100 questions at a hearing tomorrow. If he fails again to obtain satisfactory answers, he said, he will ask the full commission to advise action.

Refuses to Be "Catspaw."

Supporters of Stewart revealed they contemplate asking the U. S. Court of Appeals for a reversal of a decision requiring Stewart and three other witnesses to testify in the Transamerica case.

Stewart called the questions "irrelevent" and declared they constituted an "unwarranted invasion of a company's privacy," and established a dangerous precedent for all business.

He said he refused to "be used as a catspaw in smearing someone with whom we are not connected in a business way, and for whom we have the highest personal regard —A. P. Giannini."

Commissioners To Study Child Welfare Today

Hazen Sees Obstacle To Kepecs Reforms in Increased Expense

Reforms in the District's child welfare program recommended by the Commissioners' Child Welfare Review Advisory Committee after a survey by Dr. Jacob Kepecs will be studied by the Commissioners at a meeting today.

The report recommended integrating scattered agencies into a co-ordinated program under direction of an expanded Child Welfare Division, with an annual appropriation of $636,660, almost double the present allotment.

Commissioner Hazen said yesterday the increased expense appeared the main stumbling block. He pointed out the child welfare program was one of many District needs for which increased appropriations had been sought. Among these he cited the $30,000,000 five-year school expansion program, increased relief, police protection and funds for the new municipal center.

A meeting of organizations interested in child health was scheduled for 11 a. m. today in the board room of the District Building to plan May Day-Health Day activities. Dr. Ella Oppenheimer is chairman of the celebration, part of a national program sponsored by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

The Once Over

Dr. Roosevelt Examines The Patient Again

Dr. Roosevelt—How're you feeling, Sam?

Uncle Sam—I really feel rarin' to go. I want to thank you for those new pills.

Dr. Roosevelt—What new pills?

Uncle Sam—Those old Dr. Hopkins tablets.

Dr. Roosevelt—Oh, those! Are you taking 'em just as he prescribes?

Uncle Sam—Yes, indeed. If you'll hand me the bottle I'll take one for you now so you can see what it does to me.

Dr. Roosevelt—Don't bother.

Uncle Sam (with enthusiasm)—It's such a lovely bottle and I like the label. It says, "Dr. Hopkins Appeasement Pills. Recover Now and Reform at Your Leisure."

Dr. Roosevelt—He would get in that darned word "appeasement."

Uncle Sam—Of course, Dr. Roosevelt, I understand fully that, even though Dr. Hopkins' picture is on the label, it's really your medicine.

Dr. Roosevelt—Is that so?

Uncle Sam—I've been in this hospital long enough to know you're the chief of staff, haven't I?

Dr. Roosevelt—I hope so. But the recent staff changes and the new arrangement of nurses, et cetera, is confusing to a patient.

Uncle Sam—I'm not confused.

Dr. Roosevelt—Don't be too sure! How long since Dr. Hopkins has seen you?

Uncle Sam—Oh, he was here just a few minutes ago. He gives me constant attention. I never saw a doctor so busy. He must be a great help to you.

Dr. Roosevelt—That's what you think!

Uncle Sam—Everything seems different around here. Morganthau's changed a lot, too. He doesn't just stand around and hold thermometers and bandages any more like he used to. He talks and smiles and everything.

Dr. Roosevelt — Everybody's quite busy, I take it.

Uncle Sam—He has the cutest little blue card. Whenever a nurse comes near me with a bottle or anything he shows it to her. It says, "Will It Contribute to Recovery?" It's quite an idea. You thought it up, I'll bet.

Dr. Roosevelt—I'm not prepared to take credit at the moment. Are you sure all the change isn't too abrupt?

Uncle Sam—Oh, no. The mere fact there's a change makes me feel better.

Dr. Roosevelt—You still have those circles under your eyes.

Uncle Sam—Yes, but not so many people are running around in them.

Dr. Roosevelt—Of course nobody wants you to get better more than I do, but don't you think maybe Dr. Hopkins is rushing you?

Uncle Sam—I might think so, except that I know he is one of your most trusted assistants. He came up under you in this very hospital. It's just the same as if I were being treated by you, isn't it?

Dr. Roosevelt—Well, in a way; that is to say, yes and no. Do I make myself quite clear?

Uncle Sam—No.

Dr. Roosevelt—Good. I don't wish to be too explicit at the moment.

Uncle Sam—But I can go on taking the Hopkins Pills in the full assurance that you stand behind every pill, can't I?

"Dr. Roosevelt—Don't ask so many questions; they'll only upset you.

Uncle Sam—It's not getting answers that upsets me!

Dr. Roosevelt—Now just calm yourself. I'll be back shortly. I'm sort of looking over the situation.

Uncle Sam—Dr. Hopkins and Dr. Morganthau will be here any minute with that blue sign. Don't you want to wait and see it?

Dr. Roosevelt—No. And whatever you do, don't try to take it in a glass of hot water until you hear further from me.

Dr. Roosevelt—Do I know it!

Hitler's Great Raid

IF THE PURPOSE of Hitler's action this week were the subjugation of Central Europe with a view to the conquest of the Russian Ukraine, it is improbable that either Mr. Chamberlain or M. Daladier would be taking so grave a view of the situation. They had resigned themselves at Munich to Nazi domination of Eastern Europe, and they were prepared to be uninterested in a Nazi-Soviet war.

But the events of this week have shown not merely that Hitler is unfaithful to the letter and the spirit of the Munich accord; they have shown that he is unable to be faithful to that agreement. He is unable to treat Central Europe as a domain which he can consolidate and develop more or less peaceably for the benefit of Germany; his actions show that he is compelled to treat Central Europe as an immediate military resource with which to overcome the rapidly growing power of the Anglo-French alliance. It is fairly evident that he has struck so suddenly, not in order to construct the great Pan-German Empire of his dreams, but in order to strengthen at once his declining military power, and to prevent all that that would imply in the way of a decline of the Nazi control within Germany itself.

Can Obtain Arms In Seized Areas

WE ARE witnessing a policy which may be described from Hitler's point of view as a policy of preventive aggression. He has struck down the Czecho-Slovak state and he is threatening Rumania because in those two countries he can obtain immediately by military force the munitions of war which he can no longer obtain from his own exhausted reserves. Since about December 1, he has been falling behind in the race of armaments. If ever it should become clear that he had conclusively lost the race of armament, not only his ambitions would be ruined but his regime would be in mortal danger.

To consolidate what he appeared to have won at Munich, to establish an enduring empire over Eastern Europe, he has to maintain the decisive military superiority over Britain and France which he possessed last September. That superiority is essential to him. For if he loses it, he not only runs the risk that some day the British and French might decide to reverse the humiliation of Munich; he is faced with the fact that immediately in Central Europe the resistance of the people will grow more and more troublesome. When his spokesmen tell us that rearmament in the west has incited the Czechs and others to obstruct his ambitions, they are almost certainly speaking the truth.

Nations To Fight If There Is Hope

RECENT EVENTS have shown that the Eastern European people, whom he means to subjugate, will fight for their independence and their liberties if hope of any kind is left to them. For this reason Hitler has not been able to carry out the Munich accord. Unless he can redress the military balance in his own favor, and acquire the means to overcome once more the Western Powers, the peoples of Eastern Europe will find ways of resisting that will make his expansion too costly and too dangerous.

For the past three months his prestige has been falling rapidly in Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia, in Hungary and even in prostrate Czecho-Slovakia. The decline of his prestige reflects the fact that his own military power is not increasing, and with the German resources available cannot increase, whereas the military power of the west is increasing, and, with its much greater resources, can increase more or less indefinitely. The resistance in Central Europe to the consummation of the Munich plan is the direct consequence of the reversal of the balance of military power.

Eastern Europe Mastery Fizzles

HITLER HAS found what every other man of his ambitions has found before him: that no one can be master of Eastern Europe unless he is also master of Western Europe. Napoleon discovered that in the disastrous Russian campaign of 1812. The Kaiser discovered it in 1917 after the treaty of Brest-Litovsk.

Now for a brief moment in September Hitler was the master of Western Europe. But the position he had then he has been losing rapidly ever since September, and unless he can at once re-establish the military preponderance with which he overcame the western nations, his whole position abroad and at home is critical.

That is almost certainly the reason why he has struck where he has struck and in the way he has struck. The seizure of Czecho-Slovakia, without notice and without any serious effort to justify it by preparatory propaganda, almost certainly means that Hitler decided he must have at once the military resources of that nation. He has gotten the equipment for about 35 divisions of troops; he has gotten a very considerable fleet of airplanes; he has gotten the Skoda arsenals; he has gotten a gold reserve and some raw materials; he has gotten man power which he can draft for military purposes. Only by striking swiftly could he have been sure of obtaining these military supplies. For if it had been realized that he intended to move, there would have been time to destroy instead of surrendering the Czech armament, to blow up the munitions plants, and to remove the gold.

Britain And France Realize Menace

THE FACT that Rumania was confronted at once with demands —demands which mean in effect that the Rumanian oil and grain would be subject to military requisition—is the final and conclusive proof that Hitler is not now constructing a Pan-German empire but that he is making a gigantic raid for the purpose of re-establishing his military power as against the British and the French. The fact that he is moving so swiftly and so ruthlessly indicates that he means to use immediately whatever military supplies he can now capture in order to challenge the British and French finally on the issue of who is to be master of Europe.

That is the reason, we may be certain, why the British and French realize that unless they stop the raid into Central Europe they will be faced within a very short time with a challenge from Germany and Italy that is infinitely more serious than that of September. For what Hitler has gotten from the Czechs and is asking of the Rumanians will help him only if he uses it immediately. It is a perishable asset. In another year the growing strength of the western nations will again have overcome the advantage he has from these immediate gains, and Hitler's own position will be even more desperate than it is now.

No Chance Now But To Resist

THIS WILL account for the fact that Mr. Chamberlain, after all his efforts at appeasement, after all his hopes of disentangling Britain from the affairs of Eastern Europe, has no choice today but to organize resistance by Rumania, Russia and all the other eastern nations that can be persuaded that their own future depends on joining a defensive alliance. If Great Britain today washed its hands of the Czech and Rumanian affair and allowed Hitler to capture the military supplies he is after, it would be only a matter of weeks before these military supplies were transported to the western front and were being used to challenge the whole British and French power in the world. We may suppose, therefore, that Mr. Chamberlain knows that if he does not organize a resistance by the Rumanians and Russians today, then tomorrow he will have to choose between a general war and another but much greater Munich, a Munich at the expense not of the Czechs, but of the British and French.

As a matter of fact, the decision appears to have been taken. For the British and French have defied Hitler so definitely that if they retreated now it would be the certain sign to both Hitler and Mussolini that their historic hour had come, that the democracies were decadent, and that this was their supreme opportunity to realize all their ambitions. Whether resistance now means war now it is impossible for any man to say. But what can be said is that whereas an organized defensive resistance now may still avert war, the failure of the resistance now will within a very short time produce a choice between war with all its devastation, on the one hand, or total surrender followed by social disintegration in Western Europe, on the other.

And so, though war is by no means inevitable, the hope of peace rests upon how certain, how formidable, how resolute and how general is the resistance that can be organized immediately.

Kite Liquor Tax Case Delayed by Illness

Harrisonburg, Va., March 20.—Illness of one of the defendents caused postponement today of the trial of Melvin Kite, suspended Washington police officer; his brother, Lerter V. Kite, of Page County, Va., and Charles Good, of Stanley, charged with evading payment of taxes on a licensed distillery.

Judge John Paul, of the Federal District Court here, set May 22 as the new trial date. The defendants were indicted at Danville on charge of operating a distillery with intent to defraud the Government of taxes.

Profits Tax Murderous

By Mark Sullivan

IF YOU seek cheer, reflect upon the undistributed profits tax. It was enacted three years ago with great acclaim. Today it would not be enacted, and may be wiped out. The country, including some New Dealers, is learning hard economic lessons. The lessons are costly. As Ben Franklin said: "Experience is a dear school, but . . . some will learn in no other."

What is this undistributed profits tax? It is new. It was invented by the New Deal, in 1936, and was enacted by Congress under pressure from the Administration. Then, last year, Congress almost wiped it out, by reducing the rate of it to 2½ per cent. President Roosevelt did not like that. He protested, and would not sign the general tax bill that included it—he let the bill become law without his signature. Now, it is proposed to wipe out the undistributed profits tax entirely.

What is this tax? A corporation makes a profit. On all that profit the corporation pays the regular corporation tax. Then the corporation pays out a portion of its profits in dividends. These dividends are taxed once more, as personal income of the stockholders who receive them.

But corporations have usually kept a portion of their profits in their treasuries. This always has been regarded as sound business practice. Ordinarily the purpose is to have funds to tide over hard times, or to enlarge the plant, or otherwise expand. (A few corporations kept a surplus in their treasuries for other reasons, which will be mentioned later.) On this surplus, kept in a corporation's treasury, is put a special tax. This is the undistributed profits tax.

U. S. Not Deprived Of Much Revenue

FOR THIS TAX there was some justification. There are some corporations that are, as Mr. Roosevelt put it, "owned or controlled by a comparatively small number of very rich stockholders." A few such corporations kept large surpluses in their treasuries, not for any business need they might have for the money, but for another purpose. They did it to save their rich stockholders from paying very high rates of income surtax on the dividends they would receive if the dividends were paid out. This was as Mr. Roosevelt conceded, "strictly legal." Nevertheless it was a device by which a few rich persons avoided paying as much taxes as they otherwise would. That the Administration should try to stop this device, was reasonable.

Yet the retaining of undistributed profits did not deprive the Government of very much revenue. To a certain extent the ballyhoo for the undistributed surplus tax was the ordinary sort of New Deal cry. Mr. Roosevelt's advocacy of the tax included frequent repetition of such phrases as "very rich stockholders" and "greatly increasing private fortunes." After all, those undistributed profits would have to be paid some time. And when paid as large dividends they would incur a higher rate of personal income surtaxes on the stockholders than if the dividends had been paid out annually in the normal course.

Actually the New Dealers, certainly some of them, had another motive for the undistributed profits tax. They did not want corporations to have large amounts in their treasuries. For the New Deal has the instinct of the authoritarian governments. Authoritarian government is jealous of anything within the State that is not a part of the State. And the New Deal was jealous of corporations having large amounts of money in their treasuries. They think it gives power to the corporations, and the New Deal does not want any institution to have much power except the Government.

Tax Is Handicap To Corporations

THE NEW DEAL had another reason. Possession of money would enable the corporations to expand. And the New Deal did not want any business to be able to expand, without first getting the New Deal's consent. Newspaper men at a press conference once heard Mr. Roosevelt make a remarkable statement. He said that in no business should there be any plant expansion without first getting consent from the Government. As an illustration, he mentioned the cement business. He said there were already more cement plants in the country than were needed, and that no new factory should be permitted to be built until after, in the judgment of the Government, consumption had caught up with the existing plants. Mr. Roosevelt said this during NRA, and that was the philosophy of NRA. It was a philosophy of limitation, of restriction—strangely in contrast with New Deal slogans about "abundance."

The undistributed profits tax has been a handicap to corporations. To small business it has been murderous. Small businesses are built up by keeping their profits in their treasuries. They use the profits to grow. If they can't keep their profits they can't grow. If there had been an undistributed profits tax since 1893, Henry Ford would still be making automobiles in a one-room factory; he could not have achieved mass production and low prices.

Mr. Roosevelt last year admitted this effect of the law. He said "in practice the act . . . undoubtedly did prevent many small corporations from normal and reasonable expansion."

Repairing The Dike

By Barnet Nover

Can Hitler Be Blocked?

A YEAR after the destruction of Austria, five and a half months after Munich, the democratic powers of Europe are taking the first real steps to repair at least some of the tremendous damage done by those developments.

They can no longer hide from themselves the fact that the policy of retreat in the face of repeated aggression has, at best, only postponed war; that the sacrifice of Austria and the Sudetenland has not appeased Hitler but only whetted his appetite for more territory. Before these areas have fully been digested the powers have seen the Fuehrer swallow up Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia. And they are obsessed by the wholly justifiable fear that Hitler will go on and on.

HE WILL, because he must; because he reasons that the nations in Germany's path are too weak individually to resist the tremendous pressure he is in a position to exert upon them, and because he is convinced that the western powers will not and cannot help his potential victims.

His calculations may be as wrong today as they were right yesterday. Austria did not resist but Rumania may; Czecho-Slovakia did not resist but Poland may be an altogether different story. And what is most important, there is a very strong possibility this time that if either Poland or Rumania resist they will not be alone. But the Fuehrer has discounted such possibility again and again, and each time was right while his timid advisers were wrong, that no warning, however strong, from London and Paris may make an impression upon him.

THAT IS one fact which makes the present crisis even more dangerous than that of last September. Then neither the British nor the French governments had the least desire of fighting to defend the territorial integrity of Czecho-Slovakia. What they feared most was that Czecho-Slovakia would fight and in so doing drag Europe into a general war. Their efforts were very largely directed, therefore, to sapping the Prague government's will to resist and compelling it to make concessions to the Third Reich which would satisfy Hitler and thus avert a German military invasion of Czecho-Slovakia.

Hitler was not satisfied. Having secured the Sudetenland he craved the hinterland without which the Sudetenland has been more of a liability than an asset to the Third Reich. And hardly were his legions in Prague when he began to put pressure on Rumania to enter voluntarily into Germany's economic orbit or face invasion. The same thing would be true if he took Memel, which is valueless without its Lithuanian hinterland or Danzig which cannot exist outside the Polish economic orbit.

Rumania In A Difficult Spot

Rumania's position is very grave. There is no certainty, however, that Hitler contemplates an immediate military invasion of that country. There is a limit to his calculated recklessness. For while Rumania is in no position to defend herself successfully against a frontal assault by the German military machine, an attack on Rumania awaits the consolidation of Germany's position in Czecho-Slovakia and the subjugation of Hungary. It is possible that Hitler may again succeed in securing what he wants by the threat of force alone.

It is possible. But with each passing victory achieved in that fashion the probability diminishes that it will be successful again. For the nations living along the periphery of the enlarged Third Reich are now fully aware that economic subjugation alone may not content the Fuehrer.

The choice before the little powers, therefore, is no longer that of giving up a part to have the whole but of fighting or surrendering. And they may decide to fight.

AT THIS POINT the attitude of Great Britain, France and Russia becomes of paramount importance.

It is apparent that the London and Paris governments are anxious to build a new dike in the way of the Nazi flood which now threatens to overwhelm all Eastern Europe. They have used strong language in protesting to Berlin against the rape of Czecho-Slovakia. They have refused to recognize the German protectorate over the Czech regions as they did recognize the German-Austrian anschluss and the cession of the Sudetenland.

They are seeking, at this eleventh hour, to form a coalition against the Third Reich and to make such a coalition effective they are calling upon Russia to join, although throughout the Czecho-Slovakian crisis of last summer and fall they treated Russia with disdain.

Russia Now Being Courted

THEIR PAST plagues them. Rumania, Poland and the other nations in the path of the Nazi steamroller cannot be sure that the promises of support they may now be given by Great Britain and France will prove of any greater value than the repeated assurances of loyalty and support which Czecho-Slovakia received from France. And Russia, having been cast in outer darkness by Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier is understandably coy now that she is being courted by the very powers that so contemptously jilted her in 1938.

The fact is that Russia's position has grown in importance since Munich. The nations that may be the next to suffer Czecho-Slovakia's fate are in most instances closer to Russia than was that unhappy republic. Russian support can be of more immediate value to a beleaguered Rumania or Poland than any direct support which France and Great Britain can give. And while Moscow's sharp note to Berlin refusing to recognize the German protectorate over the Czech provinces is very important it does not of and by itself constitute a clear indication of what Russian policy will be in the critical weeks that lie ahead.

ONE KEY to the present situation, therefore, is to be found in Moscow. The other is in London. It is to London, rather than Paris, that the smaller nations look for aid in this critical hour. For as London moves so does France.

As it happens, London has at last come around to a realization of what Hitler's program is leading to. The policy of appeasement has been relegated to oblivion, so also the old British concept that what happens in central or eastern Europe is of no concern to Great Britain. The British lion is beginning to stir out of a long sleep. It is a heartening spectacle. But in Berlin they refuse to believe the evidence of their senses. And even if they do they may decide that Germany must strike out further in the east to make certain that their flank will be secure, their resources adequate, once they decide to strike out in the west.

Sulfapyridine Cure Suggested ForPneumonia

Can Be Used Quickly Without First Testing, Pharmacists Told

The posisbility of saving pneumonia sufferers' lives with the newly developed and recently released drug "sulfapyridine," was discussed last night by Dr. Harry F. Dowling, public health department co-ordinator and clinical instructor at George Washington University Medical School.

Dr. Dowling talked before the Washington branch of the American Pharmaceutical Association, at the American Institute of Pharmacy.

Explaining that the drug requires no test to determine which of the 30 types of pneumonia is present, Dr. Dowling pointed out that many lives could be saved by treating pneumonia in its early stages.

Practically every patient he had treated on the first day of actual infection had recovered, Dr. Dowling said, but the greater the delay the less the chance of recovery.

The cost of drugs in curing the average patient of pneumonia would be reduced from about $72 to about $7.20, by using this method instead of serotherapy, he declared.

Farouk Uncovers Pharoah Who Sacked Jerusalem

Cairo, March 20 (AP).—Young King Farouk descended into a tomb in the Nile delta today and pried open a coffin of purse silver to discover the bejeweled mummy of one of his more famous predecessors—King Shishak (Sheshonk), founder of the twenty-second dynasty, who lived about 950 B. C.

The coffin was in a sarcophagus of pure gold in the tomb of Pharaoh Psou Sen Nef, the last king of the last dynasty, and at first was believed to have been his.

According to the Bible, Shishak "in the fifth year of Behoboam," attacked Jerusalem with a vast army, ransacked the city and stripped Solomon's Temple of its treasures.

Army Court Starts Probe of Soldier's Death

An Army court of inquiry yesterday began an investigation into the death of Sergt. Edman F. Garrett, 35, Fort Washington soldier whose body was found sprawled beside Livingston road a short distance from the District line last Saturday.

After seeing where the body was found and questioning a dozen persons in regard to Sergt. Garrett's whereabouts the day of his death, the court recessed without deciding whether the soldier was murdered or killed by a hit and run driver.

Maj. G. A. Jackson, president of the investigating board, said he hoped results of an autopsy performed at Walter Reed Hospital would throw some light on the case. He expected the report today.

Yesterday's inquiry revealed that a fellow sergeant had seen Garrett about midnight Friday, a quarter-mile from where his body was discovered next morning, walking in the middle of the road.

Civil Service Inquiry Opens Next Monday

Ellender Wants Spotlight on 'Petty Czars' Among Officials

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, yesterday said he will begin hearings next Monday afternoon in connection with the civil service administration investigation authorized by the Senate more than a year ago.

Prior to the creation of a special Senate committee, Senator Ellender complained that many pretty girls and influential men are being promoted in government departments over the heads of more able employes.

Spotlight on "Petty Czars"

He asked for the inquiry, he said, to throw the spotlight of publicity upon the activities of "petty czars" in the executive departments.

Asked yesterday whether he intends to call any of the pretty red-headed girls who, he said, are favored in some bureaus, Ellender said he had hundreds of complaints but intended to limit the hearing to typical examples of maladministration of the civil service acts.

May Inject "A Little Sex"

He added that "a little sex" may be injected into the investigation, however.

Other members of the special Senate committee are Senators Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky; Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado; Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire.

Harry B. Mitchell, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, will be the first witness.

D.C. Job Increase Almost Doubles Last Year's Rate

Jobs for 2,431 persons were found by the District Employment Center in February, an increase of 1,183 or 94.7 per cent above the figure for the same month last year, C. E. Lamson, center director, announced last night.

Lamson said February was the seventh consecutive month an increase has been noted over the corresponding month of the previous year.

He said placements in private industry for the month were 2,283, or 86 per cent higher than last year.

New Soviet 5-Year Plan Approved

Moscow, March 20 (AP).—The Eighteenth All-Union Congress of the Communist Party today approved a report on the Nation's third five-year plan and appointed a commission headed by Josef Stalin to carry out proposed changes in the party's rules affecting membership.

Andre Alexandrovich Zhdanoff, head of the Soviet bureau of propaganda, suggested the changes, asserting the time had come to abandon mass purges of party membership and to adopt democratic procedure in internal party affairs.

Inflation Scouted As Gold Pours In

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau asserted yesterday he had no fear of inflation resulting from the renewed influx of European gold which has pushed Treasury gold stocks past $15,000,000,000.

The Treasury Secretary told a press conference there was no reason to talk about inflation at a time when the commodity price index was about 75 per cent of the 1926 level.

Barbary Coast Has Dropped Homicide for Home Furnishings

Yet Visiting Firemen Scarcely Set Foot In San Francisco Ere They Demand Trip Where 1,000 Girls Per Block Once Frolicked

By Inez Robb.

Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Distributed by International News Service.

San Francisco, March 20.—"The lovliest colored show in town" is the fading legend still written across Purcell's, the name of a famous— or infamous—cabaret at No. 543 Pacific street, the very heart of the old Barbary Coast.

INEZ ROBB

Today a new bright sign hangs in front of Purcell's. The new sign reads: "Future home of Merli Brothers, pottery, glass, china, antique furniture of domestic and imported distinctive creations. Open April 1."

There is the story of Barbary Coast in a nutshell—or two signs. From antics to antiques, from homicide to home furnishings in a generation.

The old Barbary Coast, the most brutal, notorious and obscene vice district in the United States, is gone but the malodorousness lingers.

Yet visiting firemen from all over the world scarcely set foot in San Francisco before they demand a sightseeing tour along Barbary Coast.

Once these streets teemed with people, with from 500 to 1,000 dance hall girls in each block. Cabarets, now crumbling, were once as sinister as they were gay.

Today these two blocks are a bleak conglomeration of auto repair shops, vacant buildings, a half dozen cheap restaurants and beer parlors, a sausage factory, a Chinese laundry and a barber shop.

A tea company has razed old buildings and erected a six-story business structure.

The whole aspect of these blocks is depressing because of their ugliness. But they seem about as sinister and menacing as Main street in Podunk.

Postlude

Louis A. Potter conducts the Washington Choral Society Monday night in a performance of Bach's "The Passion of Our Lord According to Saint Matthew" in Washington Cathedral. Soloists; Ruby Potter, Helen Howison, Mary Apple, David Manley, Wilfred Smith, Sam Cotton, C. H. Derbyshire, J. L. Stinson, Harry Yeide, Lottie Volkmer, Madalynne Cheatham, Florence Ludy, Bertha Morgan and L. M. Gates. Organist, Lyman McCrary; pianist, Willa Semple; personal manager of orchestra, Dr. Walter Bauer.

For the second time the Washington Choral Society presented Bach's "St. Matthew Passion" last evening in Washington Cathedral as a religious service, the purpose for which it was composed and first performed on Good Friday of 1729 in Leipzig. Just as the circumstances of the performance make applause unseemly and prohibited, so do they preclude the critical consideration usually given to technical and artistic aspects of a concert. A large audience listened to the great work with reverence and profound appreciation of its spiritual nobility, grateful for the opportunity to hear it disclosed in a sincere mood of meditation and worship.

The custom of performing the Passion in a narrative and dramatic form is an exceedingly old one. In the Protestant church, the presentation in German and in artistic style did not take place earlier than the last half of the sixteenth century. The earliest Passion music arranged for chorus after the Gospel of St. Matthew is found in Keuchenthal's "Gesangbuch," published in Wittneberg in 1573; there is a short instrumental introduction and conclusion, and only the words of the crowd are allotted to chorus. A similar work is the Passion according to St. John, printed in Selneccer's 'Gesangbuch," 1587, which includes hymns to be sung by the congregation.

Preceding Bach, Passions were written by Bartholomaeus Gese, Heinrich Schuetz, Johan Sebastiani, Reinhold Keiser and other composers. Each followed the procedure of Sebastiani, with the addition of new forms derived from the dramatic elements of the narrative. He undertook the St. Matthew Passion at the request of the learned theologian and impressive preacher, Salomo Deyling, who wished to improve the services in the Leipzig churches. Deyling's suggestions these:

"Your best singer, who can pronounce clearly and well, must sing the words of the Evangelist in recitative, and, in order to produce more impression and life and variety, the other persons of the story must be represented by other singers, and the Jewish people by a chorus. At the chief points in the story there will be pauses, during which, by means of an aria, the congregation shall lay to heart what they have heard; and that we shall all of us be refreshed from time to time, there shall be well-chosen verses from all the known hymns in which the congregation can join. Now, your business is to carry all this out in a connected and artistic manner."

Bach "carried it out" on a tremendous scale: a double choir, a ripieno choir of sopranos, a double orchestra and double organ part; a solo tenor part for the Evangelist which calls for an accomplished singer, and solo parts for sprano, alto, tenor and basso. The words of the crowd are always assigned to double choruses, which throw the words forward and back in a turbulent vehemence. The chorals were originally to be sung in unison by the congregation, and in harmony by the choir and the instruments.

Spear Replaces Adm. Conard As Paymaster

New Fiscal Chief Faces Record Peace Spending by Navy

President Roosevelt yesterday named Capt. Ray Spear, veteran Navy supply officer, to be paymaster general of the Navy and chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

In choosing a successor to Rear Admiral Charles Conard as chief fiscal and procurement officer, the President did not follow a purported policy evidenced in a number of recent appointments of naming relatively junior officers to important administrative posts. The 60-year-old nominee is the ranking eligible Supply Corps captain.

Capt. Spear, on duty in the Shore Establishments Division, will relieve Admiral Conard April 1, when the latter will retire. He will have the rank of rear admiral while paymaster general. In announcing Conard's retirement, Secretary Swanson commended the admiral, a native of Washington, for his "long and distinguished" career covering more than 40 years.

Two Billions to Spend

As paymaster general during the next three and half years—he will not be able to serve a full four-year term because of his age—Capt. Spear will have the spending of more than $2,000,000,000. With naval expenditures mounting, it is expected that he will supervise the expenditure of more funds than any previous peace-time Navy pay chief.

A native of Illinois, Capt. Spear served as a private in the First Washington Infantry in the Spanish-American War. He was appointed an assistant paymaster in the Navy in 1900. In the World War the new paymaster general was supply officer of the cruiser and transport force in the Atlantic, and was awarded the Navy Cross and the Distinguished Service Medal.

From 1928 to 1932, Spear was supply officer at the Washington Navy Yard. Transferred to similar duty at the Naval Academy, he returned to Washington in 1936. In the last two years he has acted as an adviser for supply problems to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, in the latter's efforts to speed up the naval building program.

Hazen Favors Tuition for Nonresidents

Backs Ballou Stand Against Outsiders In D. C. Schools

Commissioner Hazen said yesterday he strongly favored requiring nonresident children to pay tuition in District schools. He said free instruction for outsiders had been a sore point for several years.

He supported the stand of School Superintendent Ballou, who told a House sub-committee on District appropriations last week that the District was furnishing education to 2,400 children whose parents work in Washington but live outside the District, at annual cost of $200,000.

Hazen said the District should take care of its own children first. He said overcrowding might make even a proposal to admit nonresident pupils on a tuition basis unsatisfactory.

He said outsiders had insisted the schools be open to nonresidents since the District is partly supported by the Federal Government. He added the Federal Government was contributing only half of what it should to the District schools.

Civic Group Asks Less Spanking In D. C. Schools

Lincoln Civic Association last night instructed its delegates to the Federation of Civic Association to seek a resolution calling on the Board of Education to ease its regulations dealing with corporal punishment in the schools.

Two hundred children attended the meeting, held in Thaddeus Stevens School, and indorsed their parents' stand.

The unit directed Edward F. Harris, president, to appoint a committee of parents who would co-operate with school officials in preserving order at school and decreasing school vandalism.

3 Senators Offer Bill to Purge Relief of Politics

By the Associated Press.

Three Senators jointly submitted to the Senate yesterday a bill they said would provide safeguards against politics in relief and prevent other "pernicious political activities."

The measure, sponsored by Senators Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico; Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont, would make it unlawful:

To furnish or disclose names of those receiving compensation from relief funds to a candidate or campaign manager or their agent, or to receive such a list of names for political purposes.

To intimidate, threaten or coerce any other person to vote for or against any Federal candidate.

For anyone in a Government administrative position to use his official authority to influence or affect results of elections.

To promise employment or other benefits as a reward for political activity.

A Woman's New York

Fashion Show Now Can't Be Told From The Old-Time Salon

New York, March 20.

THE MOST elegant fashion shows of the season, now winding up in a blaze of tonic and soda, are just as much prime social gatherings as they are parades of style, these days. These exclusive showings by free-lance creators attract not only us humble reporters, but the wit, wisdom and beauty of the town as well. Thus, business and pleasure are mixed neatly, and a good time is had by all.

ALICE HUGHES

Take the annual show by Muriel King, that lovely, long-legged girl from Seattle who came here and made good in a huge, constructive way. The other night I had three strong men strap old Mr. Hall into a boiled shirt, and we lured him to Muriel's swanky salon. The dear creature had the time of his life. The King clothes this spring are simple, beautiful and wearable. Several hunches came from the French tricolor of Revolutionary days. Many striped effects were in evidence, too. But once the showing was over, the affair turned into as interesting a party as the town afforded that night.

Those present, not counting the girls of the fashion press and their hen-pecked husbands, were a fabulously assorted lot. There were the successful playwrights, Bob Sherwood and Marc Connelly, the bald eagle of Forty-fifth street. Such writers as Dawn Powell and Selma Robinson pepped up the soiree. The great vitriolic mimic, Sheila Barrett, turned up after finishing her stint at a Broadway movie basilica looking and feeling badly after a Florida motor accident.

There was even a bloke with a monocle—the noted art director, Dr. Agha. And to top the list, the well-known Kansas psychiatrist, Dr. Karl Menninger, who seemed the shyest male in the place. This gives you an idea of the melange. Lovely clothes, gorgeous women, interesting men at a fashion show! More fun. P. S. I finally located the enraptured hall two days later. He can't take lights and music any more!

The art of journalistic snooping has reached its all-time historic high in our town—yet young folks still succeed in keeping marriages secret. It's amazing! Take Flier Dick Merrill and that little cutie, Toby Wing—married since last summer, and we just found it out. Then there's a lovely girl named Katherine Waite here, a socialite babe. We fell off our chairs at the Stork Club when we learned that she had been lawfully and happily wedded since the fall of '37! A pretty actress named Margaret Quimby ("Muggins" to her pals) has just sued Felix Good for divorce—and hardly a soul in town knew that she had eloped with the chap last April! A fine lot of indictments against us journalistic peepers, brain-pickers and eaves droppers!

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Men, Too, Need To Think a Bit About Reducing

DO YOU belong to that exclusively masculine school which clings to the double standard on the matter of avoirdupois? You men think it's too bad when a woman loses her figure, but that excess weight on a man only makes for a certain portly dignity?

Men seem to be so happily constituted that their own overweight either escapes their attention entirely or is minimized to the point that is scarcely worth mentioning. No matter how much you are overweight, you regard it as "a few pounds, perhaps."

Now, a lot of women do weigh too much, but so do many men. And if your "good providing" has made your wife a little too plump, her good cooking may easily have done the same for you. That old phrase about the way to a man's heart certainly has a great deal to answer for.

Wife Loves Praise

Your wife loves praise and she gets it by placing before you your favorite dishes, most of them fattening. Let's just stop and figure how many pounds you have gained since you have been married. Thinking back, it was probably eight or 10 the first year. Yes, you needed those—you had always been too thin.

But did you stop there? If you did, you are not in the class with the average man. He is about 30 pounds overweight. If he should weigh 170 pounds, he is more likely to weigh 200, with a good percentage on the beltline.

And when his wife does try, unobtrusively, to cut down on his meals, he takes it as a personal affront. He is forearmed with the argument that he only has one good meal a day, and he would like it to be good. After one or two attempts like that, she is cured.

Why Not Cooperate?

Instead of looking down at the mouth about it, why don't you tell your wife you appreciate her thoughtfulness in not giving you desserts? Why don't you try cooperation—that's a good word you like to use on other people.

She knows that you work hard. She knows that you like a good evening meal. But she knows, too, that you have a better chance to live to a hale old age if you are not excessively overweight.

Come right down to it, you ought to pay your wife to help you to keep your weight down. It's worth it to your health, if not to your looks.

The Gentler Sex

'Clothes That Men Like'

"Today, ladies, in the third of our little series of talks on 'How to Hold a Husband,' I want to discuss dress. Now the whole secret of dressing to please men is—dramatic contrast. By that I mean you must be a woman of many moods and dress accordingly.

"Whatever you do, don't let your husband take you for granted in the matter of clothes. Keep him constantly guessing. Do not be one woman—but half a dozen. This season's fashions offer you the opportunity to play a wide repertoire of roles in your married life.

"Now then, let us say you have always leaned toward the conservative and dignified in dress and are regarded by your husband as a 'sensible and estimable' woman. Well, the next time you have a date for luncheon or dinner with your husband, surprise him completely by appearing as an ultra-feminine butterfly or coquette. This can be done by the simple expedient of donning an utterly absurd, frivolous little hat with a coquettish veil, a slim little fitted suit with a frothy lingerie blouse, some cut-out patent leather sandals and some bright colored suede gloves to accent the color in your hat. And do carry a diminutive perfectly flat pocketbook and wear a gardenia or orchid on your shoulder. Men respond particularly to women who wear flowers and the clever wife will match every mood with the proper posies.

"Or suppose you are the good pal type of wife who goes in for casual, tailored clothes. Why not make life more exciting for your husband by turning into a 'Little Gypsy'? Imagine his delighted astonishment at seeing you come bounding in gayly in one of the new vividly striped Romany silk frocks, heavy gold ear rings dangling, and possibly a rose between your lips?

"Suppose again, your husband has reached the age where he is beginning to think of his lost youth and to be charitably inclined toward helpless little stenographers, waitresses, dancers, debutantes, etc. Now, if you are a clever wife, you will meet this situation by occasionally turning into a little girl yourself. The new 'little girl silhouette' will solve this problem for you. Include in your spring wardrobe at least one schoolgirl outfit—a little fitted suit with a flared skirt and an off the face baby bonnet. Or for variation in this role, you might have some bright young tweeds in bold plaids and checks and at times essay the role of sparkling, athletic out-of-doors girls.

"However, just one word of warning—do not sustain any one mood too long. Men soon tire of a costume, a personality, an attitude. They like change, surprise, excitement, uncertainty. If you are a little girl or a sportswoman one day, be careful to be something entirely different the next—say a sleek sophisticate in one of the elegant form fitting black moire ensembles with a silver fox cape. On the next day be a romantic, mysterious type in a dress of richly embroidered fabric with bold barbaric jewelry and a Mona Lisa smile. Then just as your husband is becoming accustomed to this mood, turn into a care free gamin or hoyden. Rush in wearing a windblown pastel swagger coat, swinging a matching felt hat in your hand.

"Remember above all, that contrast is the trick. If you are tailored for morning, be untra-feminine for afternoon, possibly Oriental and exotic for night. If you greet your husband one evening on his return home in a demure cotton print with that new "starched look" about your outfit, do not fail the next evening to welcome him in a slithering sinuous harem negligee. The third evening you might take advantage of the gay 90's influence and be an elegant Victorian in satin negligee with lacy frills.

"You see, ladies how simple the idea is. By merely taking advantage of the season's new style trends, you can become a woman of such manifold personalities that your husband will never know a dull moment in the home—will virtually find himself living in a harem and will be kept so intrigued that he will fail to notice the monthly bills."

Socially Successful High School Girls Tell Others How to Be Both Popular and Virtuous

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading the asinine letter signed, "Mother of Girls," published March 14, we think it is high time to state the high school girl's views on the subjects (a) can a girl keep her virtue and be popular, and (b) the standard social relationship between today's high school age boys and girls. We are two high school girls who have been "popular but nice," and we have (amazingly enough) found the average high school boy quite harmless. The predatory type is decidedly in the minority, and it is unfortunate that this woman's daughters have frequently run up against that type.

We, the undersigned, are both seniors in our last semester in high school, and we figure that we have dated approximately 40 boys each since we started going out with the opposite sex. We have had second, third, fourth and more follow-up dates with about all but five of these boys, and of this number, perhaps one-fourth were permitted to kiss us good night. As for "petting," not more than three tried it—and they failed. Two of the three dropped out of the picture promptly, while the third, realizing his mistake (shall we say?), reformed. You understand these are approximate figures—a sort of cross-section report of our dating experience.

The fact is this, Miss Haworth: Boys have an uncanny insight into what a girl really is, and suit their actions accordingly. They will show her respect, or try to take advantage of her, because of what she shows herself to be. Therefore, in the eyes of boys, a girl is just what she makes herself. There are many ways of attracting a boy's attention or winning his admiration. Most boys of 18 or thereabouts show a real appreciation of these qualities we are about to enumerate—that is, if they come from well-bred families. (And we have always been very particular about the boys we date, and rarely have our escorts fallen below this standard.)

In addition to physical attractiveness (and we mean the flagrant kind that seems to invite "petting"), a boy dates a girl because she combines brains and good looks, or because she is a good companion, or because she is a good dancer (you realize dancing is one of our most popular forms of entertainment), or because she has that irresistible quality (that so many boys like) of slap-happy, laughter - provoking, light-hearted hilarity which characterizes some girls from the time they get up in the morning until they go to bed at night.

Some boys—the sort who are always wanting the unattainable—value the friendship of those popular girls who are wise enough not to "show their hand," and clever enough to avoid unwanted advances. Because, Miss Haworth, pet once and your reputation is ruined. From then on, every boy you date expects to get what the first one got. The wise girl, who is "popular and nice," learns to make her conversation so witty and so interesting; her manner so charming and yet so dignified, that advances are simply ruled out. Also, her personality is so fascinating or so vivacious that her own company is sufficient.

Of course, we show affection toward the boys we like. But a good night kiss is not petting. In fact, the term "petting" could not appropriately be applied to those couples going steady who spend a little time saying "good night." It's surprising what a difference a few innocent extra minutes spent in saying "good night" mean in happiness to high school boys and girls who are (it's a well-known fact) in their most emotional years. But come what may, a girl is just what she makes herself, and she gets from boys just about what she invites or is willing to accept. Sincerely,

HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS.

Ashamed and Afraid

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 19 years old and occasionally go out with boys, but really don't care anything about men. Some of them have been very fond of me, enough to talk of marriage, even, but I could never be happy, although I would give anything if I could only fall in love with some boy—madly in love. I am very unhappy—unlike a normal girl. I am always getting a crush on some older woman—always an older woman. This crush soon goes . . . I am ashamed to tell my family, because I have heard of cases similar to mine and I am afraid they would be horrified. I have got to get hold of myself and I must have some advice. Please tell me where I can go for help. I have never said anything about this before, to anyone . . .

B. B.

Turn to Psychiatry

DEAR B. B.: The fact that you are acutely distressed by the supposition that you are emotionally abnormal constitutes the most reassuring evidence that you are, fundamentally, a girl of normal, wholesome emotional capacity. The genuinely abnormal person accepts his inclinations as a matter of course, and takes to traditional patterns of futility like the well-known duck to water, with little hesitancy and less apology. Your sick despair, your reluctant terror, in this instance, are comparable to those of the neurotic who lives in constant dread of losing his sanity—a state of mind which indicates, as a rule, that he is the last person on earth who has just cause for such a fear. Those who are really, or incipiently, unbalanced, usually regard everyone else as crazy and themselves, alone, sane.

For such persons, as for yourself, there is a potential curative—which thousands have seized upon with profit, but which other thousands ignorantly or wilfully neglect to attempt. That curative may be found in psychotherapeutic re-education; that is to say, in consultation with a competent and sympathetic psychiatrist. Preliminary to drafting these remarks, I discussed your appeal with a psychiatrist. Among other things, he said: "A great many girls pass through such a phase in their emotional evolution. This evolution is sometimes 'fixated' at certain levels of development, so that the girl has difficulty in developing beyond that point. Some removable impediment is blocking her development. Unfortunately, some girls, whose development lags at the stage where they are having 'crushes' on members of their own sex, become self-conscious about it, get bad advice, or read something which amounts to bad advice, or which they haven't understood, or which does not apply to their case, and they go into a panic and give themselves up as lost or incurable."

Yet the girl who keeps her head to the point of insisting on being saved is proving the hopefulness of her case, the doctor said. "Certainly this girl is hopeful material," he said of you. "If her fears were well founded, she wouldn't be asking advice. The fact that her self-condemnation is based on what she has 'heard of cases similar' to what she supposes hers to be, and is greatly upset about the whole thing—suggests a condition that can be corrected by a process of re-education."

In process of becoming emotionally mature, the average human being passes through three phases of emotional development: the infantile stage, when the child's attention is focussed upon himself, to the early adolescent phase, when his affections are transferred to members of his own sex (i. e., "gangs" of boys, and "best girl chums"), and, finally, to the mature, heterosexual level—when young men and young women begin to develop an ardent affectional interest in members of the opposite sex. The potentially normal person is proving his normality in holding the latter level as his objective; and in feeling shame or distress at current failure to achieve that goal. That seems to be your state of mind at the moment, and since you wish to "get hold" of yourself—by all means see a psychiatrist. The Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone ADams 1033, is at your service.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's Health Talk

—By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Undercooked Meat Causes Prevalence Of Trichinae

The United States Public Health Service made an astonishing statement when it said that there are 16,000,000 people in the United States infected with trichinae.

This disease is due to the entrance into the body of a small worm, the trichinella spiralis. The entrance is made through the digestive canal; the trichinella enters imbedded in food. The food most frequently responsible is the flesh of pigs but beef can also be responsible.

In all animals, after the worm enters the intestine it makes its way through the blood stream to the muscles and there coils up. It is the presence of the worms in the muscles which causes the principal symptoms of the disease—pain, muscular stiffness, etc. For a while they may move freely through the body, but in the course of time they become encysted and lime salts are laid down around the cyst and further development ceases. This process takes about five months in man. In the hog it may be deferred for many years. The lime salts make these cysts easily seen and are readily recognized by anatomists.

Heat Kills It

Heat kills the trichinella and it is only uncooked meat that is responsible for the spread of the disease. The commonest carriers are frankfurters and hamburgers.

"The average hot dog," an expert on the subject explains, "is barely warmed through before being slipped into its mustard bath in the yawning roll, while rare hamburgers are preferred by many persons."

The Meat Inspection Department of the United States Government does not attempt to examine animals for the presence of trichinae. It was found thoroughly impractical to try to do so. If they were not found in a sample piece of muscle, they might be found elsewhere and to be thorough every bit of flesh on the animal would have to be examined. The department requires, however, that food which is usually used uncooked shall be subjected to a temperature of 5 degrees below zero for 20 days, which kills most of the parasites.

The symptoms of the disease may vary. One of the very common manifestations is swelling of the eyelids and of the whole face. The pain in the muscles may be very severe. There are no known means of killing the parasites once they have invaded the muscles. The safest method of dealing with the situation is to be sure to eat nothing but cooked meat.

Linens Au Naturel

Paris (AP).—Many of this year's linen coats are coming out in natural ecru color. Patou shows a short one with a black crepe dress. The dress has an ecru linen belt, the jacket cuffs of black crepe. Another natural linen jacket with a black frock is topped with a brimmed hat made of the linen.

Slip Covers

says "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

Slip covers are no longer "spring and summer items," and their year-round use is due to several things. First of all, fabrics each year are increasingly beautiful, but most important of all, most of them are Sanforized, which means their residual shrinkage is less than 1%. And that in turn means that you can make sleek, close-fitting covers, which with the aid of zippers cover your chairs or divans as closely as if upholstered with the fabric. Today I'll show you two distinctive covers. The chaise has an organdy ruffle, as cool looking as a mint frappe, used on a soft blue glazed chintz interspersed with sentimental flower bouquets. The pair of chairs is covered in striped pique . . . used diagonally so that the stripes slant smartly away from each other.

Supreme Court Appointee's Wife Is Quiet and Sincere, Well-Liked

Mrs. William O. Douglas, in Her Thirties, Is Not Given to Making Impressions or Entrances and Exits

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

VERY MUCH A TOPIC of tea-table speculation yesterday was Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the newly appointed member of the Supreme Court. "Do you know her?" "What's she like?" were questions rippling on all sides as feminine Washington took its mind off the European situation long enough to look into a development close home.

HOPE R. MILLER

Like many a high-powered appointment in the Nation's Capital, the one that broke yesterday has been rumored for weeks; yet it came as something of a surprise even to close friends of the Douglases. Accustomed to associating gray hair with appointments to the highest court, Washington as a whole could scarcely believe that a man only 40 years old had won the coveted nomination.

At a small luncheon a few days ago someone jokingly asked Mrs. Douglas what the chances were. "I haven't the faintest idea," she said with a smile, then added in a more serious vein, "but it would be the nicest thing that could ever happen."

Whatever Mildred Douglas says, whether in fun or in earnest, bears weight. She isn't given to light chatter. She is quiet; rarely speaks except when spoken to, and is not given to making either "impressions" or entrances and exits. She is as sincere as anybody you'll find in Washington; is rather on the serious side; and—so say some of those who knew her in New Haven—inclined to be a bit straight-laced. I don't agree with the latter opinion. I'd say her sense of humor would save her from that.

Her clear blue eyes look straight at you as she talks. Her blond hair and slender figure give her a rather ethereal appearance, and her complexion is definitely is of the peaches and cream variety. I would be willing to wager that this daughter of an Oregon apple rancher probably was one of the prettiest and most popular girls on the campus at the University of Oregon; and the fact that William O. Douglas, a young lawyer back in Yakima, Wash., made up his mind to win and wed the pretty little school teacher before she hardly had begun her career is easy to understand. Certainly as a matron, still in her thirties and looking years younger, she is the type of person you can like without a struggle.

Her Famliy Is Main Interest

Theres' no doubt about her interests. They center largely in her husband, her 8-year-old daughter, Mildred, and her 6-year-old son, William Douglas 2d (named after his grandfather). The children go to Friends' School and their mother works actively in the parents' organization of the school.

As to other interest! Well, she belongs to the League of Women Shoppers and supported their program recently to the extent of assisting as a waitress to help serve strikers during the union-hotel upheaval.

For diversion and exercise she plays badminton two or three times a week, goes to the theater occasionally; gives small, intimate parties, but not too often; enjoys going out, but prefers staying home and entertaining there. You get the impression she likes people because she likes them, not for any special favors they may deal in her direction, but the groups she gathers to her parties are rather New Dealish in complexion and many of her friends are liberal—self-styled and otherwise.

And Now Their Phone's 'Unlisted'

Among those most frequently invited to the Douglas domicile are Senator Francis T. Maloney, of Connecticut, who was instrumental in getting Mr. Douglas to come to Washington in the first place; Senator and Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, jr., the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson, and Thomas Corcoran.

Incidentally, no matter how well you know either Mr. or Mrs. Douglas, you needn't try to reach them now by their listed telephone number. The answer will be "disconnected." Like most persons who ascend to the rarefied realms of the Supreme Court, they have an unlisted telephone.

OTHER DOUGLAS DATA: For several summers, the Douglases have spent the vacation season on Cape Cod . . . Chances are, they'll be going back there in a few months . . . Their home in Silver Spring is owned by former Senator Blair Lee of Maryland . . . The Douglas chauffeur and general handy-man has a pretentious name—it's Rochester . . . Mrs. Douglas smokes, but very rarely (you get the impression her husband would rather she wouldn't).

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Wives of U. S. Diplomats in Quaking Europe Won't Have Chance to Be 'Gallant' Under Fires

BUNTING is expected to be at a premium here through the spring and early summer. George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol of the State Department, has written to the Board of Trade suggesting that merchants decorate their stores with flags and other appropriate touches during the forthcoming visits of the greatest procession of foreign notables the Capital has ever seen: the King and Queen of England, the President of Nicaragua, the Crown Princes and Princesses of Denmark and Norway, and the Premier of Ireland.

WE HAVE been envying the wives of various foreign service officers we know here who have recently been ordered for duty to some of the "tinderbox" countries of Europe. But we learn that the wives will have no chance of playing "the gallant little woman" if events become too tense, for of all Americans ordered by our Government to leave a country where the situation is dangerous, the wives of State Department officials have to go first. This is because they must set the example to the others, and so other women will not think that because the officials wives stay, it is all right for them to remain too.

THOUGH the forsythia bushes are out full force, the grippe epidemic still seems to be with us. The Belgian Ambassador, Count van der Straten-Ponthoz, opened the current exhibition of Flemish art in Worcester, Mass., with a fever well above a hundred, and now the Countess has succumbed. She was to have left yesterday with her daughter, Countess van der Burch, for a trip to the West Coast, where the Ambassador had planned to join them later.

NADIA BOULANGER, the famous French teacher and composer, who often stays with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss at Dumbarton Oaks, will give a musicale there April 14. She will conduct a group of singers and players. Mrs. Arthur Woods has invitations out for a dinner beforehand. One of Mlle. Boulanger's most successful programs is the musical interpretation of the well known French poems, the music for which she has composed in many instances herself . . . Another party note is the dinner at which Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry will entertain on Wednesday, March 29.

MAISIE HOWARD, besides being the blondest and one of the prettiest of this year's debutantes, is also aware of the Serious Side of Life. No matter how late she has been out the night before, she is at the Corcoran Art Gallery every morning at 9 for courses in painting which she is taking.

ODDS AND ENDS: Several members of Capital society are combating early Sunday afternoon lethargy by going out to the Chevy Chase Club for bowling. Among those seen there last Sunday were Cmdr. and Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Achilles, and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios. . . The successor to Manuel Trucco, former Chilean Ambassador, will not come here until May or June, whoever he may be. The Chilean Congress will not meet until May to confirm him.

Rumanian Consul and Wife Give Farewell Cocktail Party

Babes, Called Back to Bucharest, Will Leave Washington the Latter Part of March, Sail in April

One of the most popular younger couples in the diplomatic corps, the retiring Rumanian Counselor and Mme. Mircea Victor Babes, said farewell yesterday afternoon to a sizable number of the friends they have made in Washington the past two and a half years. The occasion was a cocktail party in their handsomely furnished apartment in the Westchester Hotel, where they have brought a bit of Europe's charm to the Capital.

Their magnificient canvases, exquisitely carved chairs and the inlaid table that once was in the Trianon palace will soon be packed and shipped back to their home in Bucharest. Mr. Babes has been ordered back to the foreign office in Rumania and he and his atractive wife, who looks like a bisque doll, will leave the latter part of this month for New York, sailing from there for Europe early in April.

Since they have been in Washington, their apartment has been the scene of many dinners and teas; they have entertained and been entertained frequently, and many persons here are bemoaning the fact that they are leaving.

Receiving informally yesterday, Mme. Babes wore a trim frock of black knit lace, set off with a crimson handkerchief. Among those assisting at her lavishly laden tea table were Mme. Irimescu wife of the Rumanian minister, who wore a snappy black and white ensemble; Mme. Constantin Fotitch, who was in a brown suit, worn with a smart hat to match; Mme. Witold Wankowicz, whose white petal-covered hat was most becoming with her tailored black dress; Mrs. Rives Childs, who has known Mme. Babes for a number of years, having met her in Rumania.

Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, who wore an attractive black suit with white accents, was among the early arrivals and filled in at the tea table for early-comers until Mme. Wankowicz arrived. Among others there were Mrs. W. S. Culbertson, Mrs. Thomas Cowell, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Ghiraldo; the German Charge d'Affaires, Dr. Hans Thomsen, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, Lady Bradford Leslie, Mrs. Joseph C. Green, Jan De Rosen Mme. Rajamaitri, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, and Mme. Anna de Romer.

Bryn Mawr Benefit Is Gala Night Indeed

Brilliant Audience Welcomes Cornelia Otis Skinner in Shaw's 'Candida' at National Theater

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The season's most brilliant audience welcomed Cornelia Otis Skinner in George Bernard Shaw's "Candida" last night at the National Theater. The Bryn Mawr Alumnae Association had taken over the house for its annual benefit for the scholarship fund it maintains, and not only was the occasion a gala opening night but the most successful such event ever sponsored by the Bryn Mawr group.

Among those glimpsed in the theater were the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay and Lady Lindsay, the newest Supreme Court Justice, William O. Douglas and Mrs. Douglas, Count and Countess Roberti, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Miss Elizabeth Howry, the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, Justice Stanley Reed and Mrs. Reed and Ralph Snowden Hill.

Many dinner parties were given preceding the play. One of the hostesses, Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, left her guests for a few minutes when she arrived at the theater to go backstage and greet Miss Skinner, a classmate during the two years the actress attended the college. They reviewed events from then to now, while Miss Skinner combed her long black hair, arranging it in rolls high off her forhead, applied mascara to her long lashes and put finishing touches to her make-up with a soft little rabbit's foot. She smiled as she used the latter but offered no explanation as to whether she chose it for its magic in make-up or in the field of fortune.

Did Her Bit in Bryn-Mawr Plays

She knows something of magic, or perhaps just slight of hand, for one of her early triumphs was as a magician in Bryn Mawr's May Day festival. She took part in the annual fete both years and attended school there, and was also in many of the college plays. The family rented one of the professors' houses and lived on the campus from the time she was 6 years old until she was ready to enter her junior year in college.

"So, you see, I have more than ordinary interest in Bryn Mawr," said Miss Skinner. "I am also greatly interested in the memorial theater, the Mrs. Otis Skinner Workshop, which is being erected in memory of my mother. She put on many of their dramatic things when we lived there.

Likes Real Theater Better Than Solo Work

Commenting on the noise backstage before time for the curtain, Miss Skinner observed it was pleasant to come to the theater and find someone else there. Although she says she has not given up the solo performances for which she is most famous, she prefers the life of the real theater.

"The other is a kind of a platform experience. This is what I grew up in," she said.

Thursday she will spend part of the day at a local bookshop, autographing her recent book, "Dithers and Jitters," and an earlier one, "Excuse It Please." She will be occupied at the end of the week with sightseeing. Not that she hasn't seen Washington on the many occasions she has played here, but her young son, Otis Skinner Blodgett, aged 8, and better known as Dickie, will be down for a look at the Capital with mother as official guide.

While the reunion of classmates was taking place backstage, other Bryn Mawr alumnae were arriving with parties of friends for the performance, among them the president of the local association, Mrs. James Rowe, jr. Mrs. McAllister joined her husband and Mr. and Mrs. John Herrick and Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary who had been their dinner guests.

Mrs. Henry Abbott, general chairman of the benefit and also a classmate of Miss Skinner's, entertained, with Mr. Abbott, as guests at dinner and later at the theater, Miss Elizabeth Adams, of Concord, Mass., an aunt of Mr. Abbott's and a former prominent resident of Washington; Miss Elizabeth Davis whom Miss Adams is visiting; Mrs. George Douglas and her daughter, Miss Margaretta Douglas, of Richmond, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Blaisdell.

Chicago Visitors Have Annual Party

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, of Chicago, who are in Washington at this time each season and always attend the Bryn Mawr benefit, took two boxes. They had as their guests at dinner at the Mayflower and the theater following, Mr. and Mrs. William Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, and the Solicitor General, Robert H. Jackson.

Mrs. Howell Moorhead had in her party Mrs. James Helm, Representative Caroline O'Day, Mrs. Davis Cushman Coyle, Mrs. Stuart Fuller, Miss Ann Carrere, Mrs. Henry Rowland and Mrs. Henry Pirrs, of Milton, Mass.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Edward Sturdevant had as their dinner guests Mr. and Mrs. Frank McKnight, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Col. and Mrs. Calvin Matthews, Mrs. John B. Beardall, W. Campbell Armstrong and Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson.

Also present were Senator and Mrs Millard Tydings, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, with a party; Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis.

Others present included Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Miss Marian Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, Mrs. C. Matthews Dick, Arthur Krock, Mej and Mrs. David Barry, Mrs. Warren Austin.

Miss Anne Wilkinson, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Wilkinson, was among the attractive debutantes who were selling flowers at the theater. Miss Virginia Cook was chairman of the group and others included Miss Alice Barry, Miss Nancy Brereton, Miss Eleanor Flood, Miss Patricia Griffin and Miss Maisie Howard.

Mrs. Harry Grant was chairman of tickets for the affair and Mrs. Jack B. Tate is chairman of the scholarship committee. The girls now attending Bryn Mawr on the scholarships are Ruth Stoddard, a senior, and Mabel Faesch, a sophomore.

C. A. R. Gains 500 Members

Five hundred new members have been taken into the National Society, Children of the American Revolution, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant, national registrar, at the monthly meeting of the board of management. Mrs. William H. Pouch, the president, who was here from New York to preside, reported on her visits to the State conferences in Alabama and Oklahoma.

Mrs. John W. Kerr, organizing president, announced the formation of four new societies during the month, all named for Revolutionary soldiers. Permission was given by the board to have the flag of the City of Philadelphia in the procession of State flags for the massing of the colors at the C. A. R. convention April 22 to 24 in Memorial Continental Hall. This special permission was given due to the celebration of the sesquicentennial of the Constitution. Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke is chairman of convention arrangements.

Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, chairman for Gadsby's Tavern, reported she had secured an antique mahogany washstand for the room the society is furnishing in honor of Mrs. Pouch. A white and gold bowl and pitcher of the pre-Revolutionary war period will be presented through Mrs. George Ryland, of Arlington County. Among other gifts are some handwoven towels of the same period.

Mrs. Pouch announced the appointment of the Rev. Jack Hart, of the Valley Forge Abbey, as a C. A. R. promoter for Pennsylvania, to organize C. A. R. boys' clubs in the State.

Meat Specialist Tells Butchers What Not to Do

Demonstrates Correct Way to Slice 'Cuts' To Give Satisfaction

How the modern housewife can keep the family satisfied with their meals, avoid being caught napping by unexpected guests, and otherwise maintain an A-1 cuisine was disclosed by Howard H. White, Chicago livestock specialist, to 300 District meat retailers last night.

Speaking in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce auditorium, White put forward the theory that the woman shopper must be made to feel she is the "invited guest" of the meat store, rather than a mere customer, for maximum satisfaction in her purchases.

"When the newly married housewife rushes in at 5:30 to buy meat for supper," the clerk should not only take care in selling her the meat best suiting her demands, but give her hints in cooking it," White pointed out.

With the aid of several half-carcasses of steer, pig, and mutton, White gave a practical demonstration of the best way to slice "cuts" for satisfaction to customers—and, incidentally, continued sales.

War in China Aid to Religion, Bishop Asserts

Church and State Knitted, Reds on Run, Yu-Pin Declares

The Sino-Japanese war has "knitted together" church and state in China and made Communist domination of the government "impossible," Bishop Paul Yu-pin, apostolic vicar of Nanking, declared last night at the general assembly of District Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, at the Mayflower Hotel.

Calling the war a "blessing" for the religion in the Far East, Bishop Yu-pin asserted increasing numbers of Chinese are joining the Church, which, he said, was becoming ever more closely related to the government.

Blocked also by Chinese love of tradition, little Communist influence now remains in China, despite Soviet advances, Bishop Yu-pin said.

That few inroads by communism had been made in the government was evidenced by the fact that he, in his capacity as a cleric—and the first to oppose "the subversive influence"—had been appointed official representative of Chinese relief in this country, Bishop Yu-pin asserted.

Another speaker, Judge Ellen K. Raedy, of the Municipal Court, which handles civil cases of less than $1,000, said the recently formed branch was serving a much needed purpose in bringing justice to those unable or unwilling to go to other courts.

Since its formation last April the court has heard 20,000 cases, Judge Raedy said. Of these 2,000 have been prosecuted, and the remaining 18,000 either discharged or dismissed.

Following the speeches a one-act comedy was presented by the Blackfriars Guild of Washington.

Sergt. Comiskey, Of No. 4, Dies After Long Illness

COMISKEY

Appointed in 1925, he served as a bicycle and motorcycle policeman until 1937, when he was made a precinct detective. Considered one of the best motorcycle officers ever to serve with the Traffic Department, he was always picked for motorcycle details to escort the President and visiting foreign dignitaries.

Officer Comiskey was promoted to uniform sergeant July 1 of last year on the thirteenth anniversary of his appointment to the force after passing a perfect civil service examination. He had a notable record in crime prevention and detection work during his service as a detective.

A native of Massachusetts, Sergt. Comiskey served in the Navy before joining the police and was a chief petty officer in the Naval Reserves at his death.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Dormady and a sister, Miss Alice Comiskey, both of Washington. Another sister, Mrs. Margaret Kerr, lives in Massachusetts.

U. S. Urged To Finance Private Fliers

Aeronautic Rally Told 4,000 Couples Will Take to Air This Summer

Federal credit should be advanced private flyers for purchase of planes, Thomas J. Hildebrandt, of the Federal Housing Administration, proposed last night at a private flying rally held at the Wardman Park Hotel under auspices of the National Aeronautic Association.

"Government . . . credit can be applied to the aviation industry," he remarked.

"After taking into account the unusual aspects of the industry," he continued, "we can work out a plan for wider sale of airplanes . . . to the many people who would like to buy aircraft but are unable to do so under present financial requirements."

Predicts Few Defaults

Hildebrandt asserted Federal resources could be made available to individuals through the Civil Aeronautics Authority and emphasized his conviction that losses through default on loans would be extremely low.

Earlier speakers estimated that before summer is over 4,000 American couples will be cruising by air in planes costing between $1,090 and $1,400 and as easy to handle as tricycles.

Their speed will average from 60 to 80 miles an hour but that will be all right, since one of the things the average American private flyer wants, according to Igor Sikorsky—who has been in the game since the beginning—is less speed in the air.

"We have got to get them much slower, if we expect them to be bought up. The average family is going to be satisfied if it can look forward to cruising along at 100 miles an hour.

"To make the little planes practical, we also must have smaller flying fields much closer to the home. The automobile and the radio never would have developed if everybody had had to keep them several miles from where they wanted them," Sikorsky declared.

Officials of the Civil Aeronautics Authority termed private flying the backbone of aviation.

"The Government has done little for the private flyer. I look upon this training program as one of its biggest contributions to the private program. We intend to recruit our teachers from the ranks. You can rest assured about that." Robert Hinckley, C. A. A. member, declared.

Most Delegates Students

Three-fourths of the 200 delegates at the rally were boys and girls from colleges and universities who are staging their fifth national intercollegiate flying conference along with their attendance at lectures where they will hear about the Government's new program.

Daisy Kirkpatrick, who declared she learned to fly "after 40" and who is president of the Ninety Nines—women's aviation organization named for its number of charter members—presided at yesterday's luncheon.

Other speakers at the evening session were Jerome K. Lederer, of Aero Insurance Underwriters; Gordon M. Curtis, president of Aviation Funding Corporation, and W. W. Brinckerhoff, secretary of the Private Flyers Association. Roger W. Kahn, governor of the Sportsman Pilots Association, presided.

Girl Learns to Fly On 40-Minute Trip

Betty McKellip, 25, pretty National Aeronatuis Association secretary, yesterday took her first flying lesson, and 40 minutes later a veteran airman pronounced her qualified to pilot her own plane.

"Betty has a natural aptitude for flying," said Pilot Bill Strohneier, of Lockhaven, Pa., attending the air conference here. After a short explanation of fundamentals, we went aloft and within five minutes Betty was handling the plane herself. She even made her own landing.

Betty, secretary to Charles F. Horner, N. A. A. president, lives at 1775 N street northwest.

Three Put Up for Delegates to Parley In Hagerstown

The Central Labor Union last night nominated delegates to the Maryland State-District of Columbia Federation of Labor Convention opening May 15 in Hagerstown. The nominees are Frank W. Lee, Miss Hattie Dorfman and Arthur Schoenthal. Elections will take place at the next meeting.

Reaffirmation of its stand in opposition to the Griffenhagen proposals for District reorganization was voiced at the meeting. The union approves the Prettyman report which includes local suffrage and the commission form of administration.

At the meeting of the Industrial Union Council the Board of Education was requested to reopen the Marian Anderson case with a view to granting the use of Central High School Auditorium by the colored singer with no strings attached.

Previously the board had authorized the use of the hall with the proviso that it should not set a precedent. Last Thursday Superintendent of Schools Ballou rejected the application because it took exception to the condition made by the board.

The council also urged that $500,000 be appropriated by Congress for slum clearance in the District. The C. I. O.'s proposal for labor unity was approved and Congress was requested to hold no hearings on the Wagner act amendments until the C. I. O.-A. F. of L. peace parleys are over.

Bill Would Halt Retailers Buying Beer on Credit

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, yesterday introduced a bill to terminate the practice of wholesale dealers and brewers extending credit to retail dealers in beer in Washington.

The amendment, if enacted into law, would place the sale of beer to retailers under the same ban now applied to liquor deals between wholesalers and retailers. It would not, however, prohibit retailers from continuing to extend credit to consumers on beer sales. This credit is denied in liquor sales to the public.

Briton Contrasts Dictatorships To Democratic Countries

Strong Executive Power Need Not Be a Threat to Democracy, Dr. Catlin Asserts in Lecture

A strong executive power need not be a threat to democracy, but it is an "undue and dangerous simplification of the problem" to regard democracy as simply the rule of the majority, Dr. George E. G. Catlin, British author and former professor of political science at Cornell University, said last night in a lecture on "The Tradition of Democracy" in the Agriculture Department auditorium.

Though Lincoln had to use force to preserve democracy and Oliver Cromwell was practically a dictator after the English civil war of the seventeenth century, he declared, both differed from Mussolini because they kept the idea of liberty as their goal. While Mussolini boasts that he is "always right," Cromwell had the democratic spirit of compromise and was willing to discuss his ideas.

The dogmatic type of men who "know they know" are the enemies of democracy, Catlin said, because they are not open to reason. Based upon respect for the individual personality and his moral freedom to experiment in ways of life and grope toward a probable truth, the democratic philosophy must be tolerant, he said, but its tolerance cannot be unlimited.

The totalitarian viewpoint, which believes that truth has been revealed and must be imposed and not discussed, is itself intolerant and need not be tolerated in a democracy, he continued. Calling education the ideal remedy for intolerance, Catlin said that when democracy is in danger there is no time for education, but warned against hysterically exaggerating the danger.

Pointing out that democracy is part of a larger tradition of values dating back to ancient Greece, Catlin traced its development as a particularly Anglo-Saxon tradition since the Reformation. His lecture was the second of a series of three, of which the first dealt with "The Critics of Democracy," the totalitarian philosophies, and the last, to be given on Thursday, will treat "The Future of Democracy." The series is sponsored by the British-American Committee of the Hall of Nations Program of American University.

Sub-Committee Gets Milk Inquiry, But No Funds

The House District Committee yesterday directed the sub-committee on public health to conduct the milk inquiry authorized by the House, but no one appeared to be obtaining funds to finance the inquiry.

Representatives Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the sub-committee, said he did not intend to request any funds and Chairman Warren, of the Committee on Accounts, said he would not act until a resolution is offered asking a definite sum.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Randolph were added to the sub-committee, members of which, besides Bates, are Schulte, of Indiana; Byron, of Maryland, Democrats, and Shafer, of Michigan, and Vreeland, of New Jersey, Republicans.

Eisenhower Talks In Symposium on U. S. Management

Increased economic activities by the Government demand greater participation by the people in the effected groups in order to maintain democracy, according to Milton Eisenhower, land use co-ordinator of the Agriculture Department.

Eisenhower spoke in a symposium on Government organization problems before the Washington Society for the Advancement of Management at a dinner last night at the Y. W. C. A.

Other speakers were Marshall E. Dimock, Second Assistant Secretary of Labor; William H. Husband, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and Aldo Raffa, Railroad Retirement Board.

Lincoln Park Body Fights Liquor Store

Unanimously Against Permit for Shop Near Schools and Street Car Barns

A unanimous demand that the Alcohol Beverage Control Board refuse to issue a license for a liquor store at Fifteenth and A streets northeast was made by the Lincoln Park Citizens Association last night.

The association's reasons were the proximity of schools, gas stations and street car barns.

Other resolutions indorsed scientific testing of automobile drivers to determine degree of intoxication and opposed House bills to increase the District fuel tax by 2 cents a gallon and permit entry into schools of children who had not been vaccinated.

The association heard a representative from the Citizens' Committee on Fair Taxation speak against the proposed District sales tax. Miss Alice Siddell, association member, addressed the meeting on taxation in general.

16th St. Heights

Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association last night demanded improved transportation service for their district, emphasizing the need for a better express bus system.

Maj. Ernest Brown, superintendent of Police, urged the group to support the $75,000 fund drive of the Police Boys Club and showed movies of life at the club's camp in southern Maryland. $10 was donated to the fund.

Interfederation

Experts on county government, housing and citizens' organizations addressed the monthly meeting of the Interfederation Conference of Civic Organizations in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building last night.

Speakers were County Manager Frank Hanrahan, of Arlington; Mrs. Helen D. Hoffman, executive director of the Washington Housing Association, and Geddes W. Rutherford, of the University of Iowa, now in Washington studying the set-up of citizens' associations. Stephen James, of Montgomery County, presided.

Capital News In Brief

Phoned Shot Stirs Police

Sidney Greenfeld, 18, of 1618 Irving street northwest, was talking on the telephone last night with his Benjamin Franklin University classmate, Morris Kerman, 20, when the receiver carried to his ear the sound of a pistol shot.

Morris is the son of Benjamin Kerman, proprietor of a grocery store at 1037 Second street southwest, who for some time has been prepared properly to receive with a pistol any robber who might pay him a visit. This Sidney knew. So he hung up immediately and called police.

A scout car dashed to the store only to learn the shot had been fired accidentally by Kerman's 13-year-old niece, Betty Shapiro, while playing with the pistol.

Boy Shot by B-B Gun

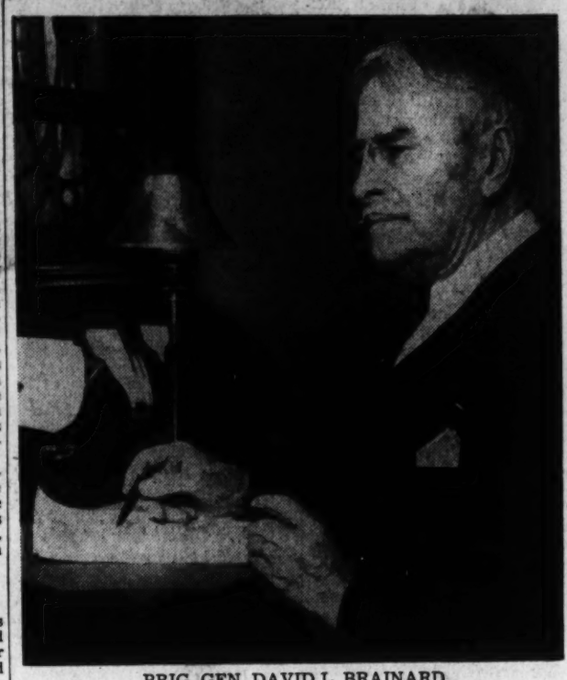
Quick medical assistance was at hand for 4-year-old Charles Hollingsworth, of 2403 Naylor road southeast, accidentally shot by a chum while they were playing with a B-B rifle yesterday. Charles was treated by his father, Dr. R. K. Hollingsworth, for a hand wound.

Ice Cream Store Held Up

A colored man, his face masked with a hankerchief and his hand in his pocket as though he held a gun, last night held up Glady's Willard, of Takoma Park, Md., in a High Ice Cream Store, 1213 Fourth street southwest, where she is the manager. He got $5.

Life Begins at 70

His 82 Years Sit Lightly, Gen. Brainard Shuts Out Past



BRIG. GEN. DAVID L. BRAINARD

[This is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross,

An ordinary man would give almost anything to be the possessor of memories which are Brig. Gen. David L. Brainard's, so he could proudly take children on his knee and watch their eyes pop as he recounted his experiences on the Greely polar expedition of 1881-84.

But Gen. Brainard, who is the last survivor of that fateful adventure on which 25 set out and only 6 came back from, is no ordinary person. The present is for too interesting for him to shut himself up in the past, however glorious that past has been.

'This Is Another Day'

"I seldom think or speak of my adventures in the Arctic," he says. "This is another day and there are other things to do."

These "other things," which have helped keep Gen. Brainard physically fit and mentally alert—he is in his eighty-third year—are manifold. First, there is his work. Ever since 1921 he has been Washington representative of a New York business house which has many retail outlets in the Capital. The job is not a rigorous one, he explains, yet it does involve many contacts each day and the preparation of reports regularly.

Then there is the matter of exercise. Every day Gen. Brainard walks from 3 to 5 miles, a habit which undoubtedly deserves much of the credit for his sound condition and the preservation of his rosy complexion and ramrodlike erectness.

Writing Another Avocation

Writing is still another avocation which helps make his days anything but monotonous. This activity represents, however, a concession to the past, since it is concerned primarily with his 44-year career in the U. S. Army. A decade or so ago Gen. Brainard wrote a book on Gen. Adolphus W. Greely's expedition, and just recently he completed an article on his participation in the Indian campaigns in Montana in the 1870's when the Sioux were causing trouble. The Custer Massacre, it will be recalled, occurred in 1876.

"Keeping busy, I find, gives one the right outlook," says Gen. Brainard. "I am as active now as I was in my 60's. Nevertheless, when I reached 80 I thought the New York firm which engages me might want to replace me with a younger man. So I put it up to them, accordingly. But they insisted that I remain on duty."

He would still be riding and golfing but for an appendectomy he underwent five years ago, following which the doctor recommended against strenuous exercise. His secretary, amanuensis and indispensable aid in general is Mrs. Brainard, who has refused to surrender to a hip fracture suffered two years ago.

They live at the Hotel Shoreham.

Trade Board Backs Joint Tax Proposal

Executive Group Opposes Progressive Levy on Incomes For Washington

Renewed opposition to a progressive income tax for the District was voted yesterday by the executive committee of the Washington Board of Trade in indorsing a resolution approved earlier by the municipal finance committee.

The resolution said the study of the District tax structure made by Dr. Chester Pond and Colin Stam had sustained the board's contention that "a straight progressive income tax is impracticable in the District because of the restriction on industry and the large preponderance of Federal employes having salaries concentrated in an extreme degree around the $2,000 mark."

Indorses Joint Tax

Instead of the straight income tax, the committee indorsed the joint income and sales tax suggested in the Pond recommendations. They scored the proposal to make the income tax provisions apply to the year 1939, rather than 1940.

The suggestion for making the income tax provision retroactive was one of several changes in the Pond report made in a committee print prepared for Congress.

Gift Tax Opposed

The proposed gift tax, which was included in the committee print as a measure designed to block loopholes in the estate and inheritance taxes, was opposed by the board.

The resolution asked that in the administration of the proposed sales taxes, the exemption on sales under 25 cents be retained, and urged that the law make clear whether collections would be based on gross sales, or merely on sales over 25 cents. The committee print provided that the District should collect either the actual sales tax paid by the customer, or the tax based on gross receipts, whichever amount was greater.

Man Flees Twice; Then Is Jailed To Think It Over

Private E. E. Skinner stopped a taxicab driver for speeding last night at Twenty-fourth street and Virginia avenue, and told him to folow him to the station. At Virginia avenue and Twenty-fifth street Skinner turned one way, the cab driver the other. About 15 minutes later Skinner pulled his motorcycle alongside the taxicab, pointed his revolver at the driver and ordered him to stop.

The driver was put in the automobile of Policeman Leon L. Frost who was on his way to work, but at the stationhouse the man bolted again and ducked into a home in the 1000 block of Twenty-first street. Frost entered the front door, Skinner the rear, and extracted the fugitive from behind a sofa.

At the station they booked him on a technical charge of investigation because the man's conscience apparently was bothering him, and they guessed he might be wanted for something more serious than speeding.

Nurses Enrolled to Strengthen Red Cross Reserves

A drive to strengthen the Red Cross Nursing Reserves to 25,000 was started last night at the District Chapter House, 1703 E street northwest. Above—Miss Annabel Peterson, president of the Graduate Nurses Association, pins Red Cross Badges on newly enrolled nurses

In honor of Jane A. Delano, first Red Cross war nurse organizer, 350 student and staff nurses from District hospitals filled the Red Cross Building Auditorium last night, to hear National Nursing Service Director Mary Beard emphasize today's need of a stronger Red Cross Nursing Reserve through increased enrollment.

Miss Beard told the students they must meet stern requirements in order to be graduated from standard nursing schools but that the reward of service both ordinary and in time of national disaster, is well worth the price.

Sponsored by the Graduate Nurses' Association and the District of Columbia Committee on Red Cross Nursing Service, the meeting opened with a processional of white-capped women into the great hall while the Metropolitan Police Boys' Band played.

A playlet depicting the training and duties of a nurse was presented by a cast of nurses from various local hospitals and Red Cross badges were presented newly enrolled nurses by Miss Annabelle Peterson, assistant director of the Red Cross Public Health Nursing Service.

"Love Affair" Reveals Deftly Turned Romance

Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer Are Costarred; Sybil Bowan on Way to Capitol Stage; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

LEO McCAREY—serving in the three-fold capacity of coauthor, producer and director—has turned in a particularly praiseworthy job in his fashioning of "Love Affair," which comes to the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater on Friday, with Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer costarred.

BELL

There is little in the content of "Love Affair" that is startlingly original or unique, but there is a great deal in its direction and the manner of its acting to make it one of the most satisfying comedy-romances of the season. It is impeccably staged and possesses that indefinable air of distinction that places it immediately in the upper brackets.

To outline the development and movement of the story would be to stigmatize it at once as something that has been done before. What motion picture plots haven't been, in these later months? Perhaps it is enough to say that the title, for once, is completely pat. It IS a love affair that is depicted, a very genuine and a very interesting and fascinating one. Mr. Boyer, of course, is the lover, and Miss Dunne, as goes equally without saying, the object of his slightly rambling affection that finally is concentrated through the instrumentality of events that may strike some as being a little arbitrary, but which, nevertheless, fit snugly into the compact pattern of Mr. McCarey's play.

Miss Dunne sings again in this one, and very delightfully, too. Mr. Boyer, whose last American-made film was "Algiers," plays suavely and effectively in a part cut with fine dexterity to his measure. Miss Dunne, it might as well be confessed first as last, since the outset of her screen career in "Cimarron," has been one of this department's favorite persons. In her present vehicle she upholds all of the laudatory things we always have thought of her.

McCarey, in projecting his purling romance, has elected to establish and consistently maintain a deliberate pace. There are no tumultuous scenes in "Love Affair." Even the most violent bits of action that punctuate the narrative are left to the imagination, instead of being flamboyantly depicted on the screen. The result is a serio-comic play that more nearly fulfills the function of adult entertainment than any other we can think of that has come along recently.

A full quota of drama desks witnessed the preview screening of the picture, under Manager Hardie Meakin's auspices, yesterday afternoon and never uttered a murmur, even when the sound track went haywire once or twice, due to mechanical rather than recording defects. The thing evidently had "got them." It probably will "get" you the same way when it is publicly shown on Friday—for reasons we shall attempt to point out in Saturday morning's more complete and particularized review.

Mr. Meakin was content with no halfway measures yesterday afternoon. In addition to the feature of his next bill he also unspooled the new edition of "The March of Time" and the next Walt Disney cartoon comedy, both of which will be included in the bill opening on Fifteenth street, come Friday. "The March of Time" is devoted entirely to the timely discussion of "The Mediterranean, Background of War," and makes clearer what is going on around the inland sea than a thousand columns of newsprint. This is a subject that everyone interested in world events should see. The Disney item is "Society Dog Show," in Technicolor. Pluto falls in love and wins a hero's medal! All very quaint.

Benny Goodman and his orchestra and specialists will present their regular weekly broadcast over Station WJSV and the Columbia network tonight, from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, direct from the stage of the Earle Theater, where they are the current stage attraction, and in full view of the audience. The house public address system will be "tuned in" so that everything that is done will be clearly audible to those in the audience.

Five stage shows again will be presented at the Earle today. It is the 9:15 performance that will include the broadcast. Now all you have to do is try to get in!

Speaking of "swing," "jive" and the like—as we were by implication—Col. James Jeremiah Lake, manager of the Gayety Theater, announces—or did from the stage on Sunday—that his Saturday night "jitterbug contests" will be continued. Not only that, but handsome cash prizes will be awarded the winners. So now you know.

Tony Muto, Washington manager of Fox Movietone News, finally has returned to his native heath after a junket of several months in South America, beginning with his attendance at the Pan-American Conference. Signor Muto, it seems, was not on a joyride, but was assiduously taking pictures for his company's South American releases, plus a few shots suitable for international exhibition.

The Beau Brummelian Earl Allvine, pinch-hitting locally for Signor Muto during his absence, plans to return to his New York post with the same organization tomorrow. Washington will be sorry to lose the Earl of Allvine, who, in a few short months, has hewed himself a definite niche in Washington's theaterdom.

So that rarely gifted comedienne, singer, dancer and impersonator, Sybil Bowan, en royte East by train, takes time out to airmail a note from Omaha, where the Overland Limited hesitated for half an hour last Saturday night. Says Miss Bowan, in part: "Just a note to tell you that your prophecy of my return in the spring was correct. I'll be at the Capitol March 31. Just think, I had to jump all the way back from the Coast. Had a beautiful trip through the Canal, played the Coast and now I'm headed for Toronto, then Washington and, after that, back to New York to rehearse the lead in the "Follies" for the San Francisco Fair, for the Shuberts. I have three sure new numbers. Bye now." It will be nice to have Miss Bowan back again. Miss Bowan is a nice girl. And at the top of her class professionally.

The long-awaited revival of Rudolph Valentino in "The Eagle," postponed when Frank Capra's production of "Lost Horizon," starring Ronald Colman, was held over for a second week, will begin tomorrow at the Little Theater. It will be accorded the usual late preview, following the final showing of the current bill, tonight. Vilma Banky and Louise Dresser lead the supporting cast.

So now it starts all over again. "What is the correct pronunciation of 'Candida'?" Everybody ought to know by this time that it is pronounced "Candida!"

Miss Skinner Impressive in Shaw Comedy

'Candida' Given Fine Performance by Able Cast at National

By Nelson B. Bell

"CANDIDA." Cornelia Otis Skinner presents the comedy in three acts by George Bernard Shaw. Directed by George Sommes. Settings by Donald Oenslager; costumes by Helene Pons. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Rev. James Mavor Morell, Onslow Stevens
Miss Proserpine Garnett, Dorothy Sands
Alexander Mill .....Philip Faversham
Mr. Burgess .....A. P. Kaye
Candida .....Cornelia Otis Skinner
Eugene Marchbanks ....John Cromwell

Abandoning the multiple responsibilities of her own unique creation of the una-drama, with which her name has been so indelibly associated in the public mind in recent years, Corelia Otis Skinner returned to the stage of the National Theater last night as star of her own production of George Bernard Shaw's penetrating, domestic comedy of "Candida," and achieved one of the most brilliant successes of her career in the theater.

"Candida" is a comedy of importance out of all proportion to the number of players required for its enactment. Only six characters are included in Shaw's dramatis personae. None may be said to be a subordinate figure in the play. Each has his or her definite contribution to make to the rounded perfection of a work that long has been recognized as one of Shaw's best—a sharply pointed, incisively humorous and deeply discursive consideration of such disturbances as might occur in the home of a young English cleric when his wife brings into the family circle a youthful dreamer whose outlook upon life is in violent conflict with her husband's. It is a war—not too bitter, but still a war—between realism and idealism that is precipitated. It is waged according to tactics that are stimulatingly fluent, convincingly argumentative and continuously delightful.

A Small But Literate Group

The Rev. James Mavor Morell, his wife, Candida; her father, Morell's secretary, an assistant curate and the adolescent poet comprise the group upon whom Shaw has cast the full burden of one of his most cogent pieces of writing. In point of sustained scenes the title role is not the most important in the play—until the last act. The pith of the drama—again until the last act—lies in the collisions, both physical and intellectual, between the husband of a beautiful and understanding wife and the aristocratically and gently bred lad, whose views are colored by a vast longing for love and an idealistic impetuosity born of his meager years. The role of the Cockney father, the secretary and the undercurate are mere embellishments of a story that could have been told with only three characters, instead of six, had not Mr. Shaw felt the urge to elaborate both his humor and his pungent philosophy.

There is no great demand made upon Miss Skinner's manifold talents during the early periods of "Candida." It is not until the last act, when she is called upon to choose between her husband and the young man whose peculiar prescience has occasioned him some concern, that the full measure of the star's stature as an actress is taken. The scene, needless to say, is the best in the play. As Morell, Onslow Stevens presents a stalwart figure of a man and a fine exposition of husbandly devotion, without at any juncture in the action marring the impression of an ardent young clergyman. John Cromwell, as Eugene Marchbanks, the poet-dreamer, is an ideal choice for the part. His reading was highly effective last night and at no time was the impression given that he was making the contrast between him and Morell too marked to be completely convincing.

Dorothy Sands Scores Hit

Dorothy Sands scored one of the decisive hits of the evening by the sprightly variety of her portrayal of Miss Proserpine Garnett, "Prossy," the harassed secretary. While it seemed to this remote outpost that Miss Sands might be "overplaying" just a trifle at times, the net result of her impersonation was so overwhelmingly valuable to the comic aspects of the three acts that an immediate error was marked on our score sheet. Sharing comedy highlights with Miss Sands, A. P. Kaye offered a lusty and amusing character study of a thoroughly middle-class money-grubber, in a little over his head. Philip Faversham completed a well-balanced and wholly competent cast in the role of Alexander Mill, the junior clergyman whose duties are not severe.

Last night's performance of "Candida" was under the auspices of the Bryn Mawr Club of Washington, Miss Skinner being a Bryn Mawr alumna. An uncounted number of curtain calls were accorded the star and her supporting players after the last act, all of which were richly deserved.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 20.—The Doris Kenyon-Albert Lasker separation which so amazed their friends, will not go to the divorce courts for several months and when it does, it will not be Reno but a less conspicuous place. Doris is still in town and getting ready to step into the role of Queen Anne in "The Man in the Iron Mask." She took a test late Friday and was signed immediately by Edward Small to play opposite Louis Hayward and Joan Bennett.

LOUELLA PARSONS

This is a characterization of the kind Doris hopes to continue doing in the movies. Although still very beautiful, she is going to forget the leading ladies and concentrate on character parts. Her house in Brentwood which Milton Sills built, has been entirely renovated and redecorated, the work having been started before she and the former head of the United States shipping board decided to go their separate ways.

We said out loud in print—you may remember — that Jimmie Stewart would be the logical actor for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and we couldn't be happier that Harry Cohn was able to borrow him from M-G-M. Interesting that Jimmie and Jean Arthur will have the star leads and that Edward Arnold will be in the picture—three people who were importantly cast in Capra's last, "You Can't Take It With You." Jimmie, by the way, was out stepping at Marcels with Georgia Carroll, the New York beauty who came to town with her chum, Katherine Aldrich. Katherine was with Bob Ritchie. I'm looking forward to seeing these two girls really do something on the screen—they're so young and pretty.

An inspired choice for the maharanee in "The Rains Came" is Maria Ouspenskaya, whose three performances on the screen will not soon be forgotten. The first was as the mother of the young baron in "Dodsworth," the second as the demented old lady who accused Napoleon of cheating at cards in "Conquest," and the most recent as Charles Boyer's aged grandmother in "Love Affair." The Maharanee, a powerful character, needs an Ouspenskaya. H. B. Warner will play the gentle maharajah and Joseph Schildkraut his secretary, Bannerjee, who helps the ruler carry out his good works. Cesar Romero will be seen as Ali Khan, one of the Hindu characterizations he does so well. Lana Turner and Arleen Whelan are both being discussed for Fern, the missionary's daughter who weds Ransom (George Brent).

A cable to my desk this morning said Merle Oberon and Alex Korda were secretly wed. I thought I had a scoop until I talked with Merle who denied that she is already Mrs. Korda but she didn't deny, nor affirm for that matter, that she will wed the United Artists producer as soon as she sets foot in Europe. I happen to know there will be a marriage shortly after Merle meets her prospective bridegroom in France.

She has changed her sailing plans and instead of traveling direct to Naples she will disembark at Cherbourg, meeting Alex there and going with him to Monte Carlo where his "Four Feathers" will be previewed. Merle was a little worried over the war situation and said she would probably be shot to bits before she comes back eight months from now.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The James Roosevelts having more fun, just the two of them, dining and dancing at the Beverly Wilshire, and later watching the show at the Versailles; Wendy Barrie had a tennis date today with Rudy Vallee, but he dined later with Barbara Brewster, who is really his current heart; Claude Stroud canceled his tour to return home to be with Barbara's twin, Gloria, who recently had an emergency operation; Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Taylor spent most of Sunday looking at Coldwater Canyon property; Alex D'Arcy, now part owner of the La Conga, threw a big party for his gal friend, Arleen Whelan, at his new night club; Norma Shearer entertained at dinner Saturday in honor of Noel Coward, who today was the guest of honor at a cocktail party given him by Cary Grant; Gabriel Dell (Dead End Kid) has a terrific yen for pretty Alice Preston; Richard Greene, who was at the Zanuck party, really looks sick and should go back to the hospital and take care of those infected tonsils.

Sensible of William Powell to ask M.-G.-M. for more leave of absence until he is 100 per cent well; Sonja Henie's "Second Fiddle" company will use the Earl Carroll Theater restaurant for one of their exteriors; Alexander Woollcott and Ben Hecht in a huddle at the Brown Derby; what's this again between Mary Brian and Shipwreck Kelly? They were dancing and dining at Marcel's; Ida Lupino gave her bridegroom, Louis Hayward, a birthday party with all the trimmings Saturday night; J. P. Morgan, jr., was guest today at the Twentieth Century-Fox lot; Willy Wyler has gone to Sun Valley to join his bride, Margaret Tallichete.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 20.—With R. K. O. turning out "Gunga Din," "Love Affair," and "The Castles" under the special producer-director unit plan, they have put into execution what every studio in town has talked about. And I believe that in a couple of months you'll see that studio go overboard on the idea and work out all future productions under that plan.

HOPPER

Frank Capra's done it always. He won't stand for front office interference; look what it's done for him.

Bob Leonard was the first to do it on the Metro lot, with the Jeanette MacDonald - Lew Ayres picture, "Broadway Serenade," which is a knock-out.

Within a year Hollywood should learn who the real creators are, and this is a sure method.

Take the case of Virginia Verrill, radio star whose voice has doubled for many of our topliners. Practically every studio has tested her, then said, "Yes, she's lovely. But she looks just like Myrna Loy." So what? Myrna can't do all the pictures and we could do with another like her.

With every producer in town screaming for new faces, they won't take time out to see those who are here.

Yes, I take that back—Bill LeBaron did. And now Maria Belita, 18-year-old English runner-up to Sonja Henie for the last Olympic championship, a ballet dancer and darling of Monte Carlo, is being groomed at Paramount for stardom. Clarence Brown saw her skating at Westwood, was crazy about her, but his studio was too busy to make the trip. Just another case of greener grass in the other fellow's pasture.

When I dashed down to see some friends off for Honolulu my eye rested upon the happiest couple there—Elizabeth Page and her mother. After seven years' research and hard labor, barely making ends meet while caring for her blind mother, Elizabeth wrote "The Tree of Liberty." And there they were on their first trip to Honolulu. Pretty smart of Harry Cohn to grab that story. Every studio in town had a chance at it, but weren't quick enough on the uptake. Now they're moaning about it.

Jeanette MacDonald is smart, opening her concert tour in small cities like Stillwater, Okla., and Peoria, Ill. She has to give a second one in Peoria. The house was sold out in two hours. And they demanded a retake. The proceeds from the second goes to the underprivileged of the city. It's from those smaller cities that the movies make their greatest profits.

Bob Ritchie stays with us awhile. He's just rented Laura Hope Crews' house.

Grand to be able to see Isabel Jewell again on the stage in "Of Mice and Men." Noah Berry had to fly to New York to play his part in "Beau Geste." Orson Welles gave him the opportunity Hollywood wouldn't.

There's nothing like a close contact with your fans. I was flattered and distressed that I couldn't make two speeches in Cincinnati in April. One for a Catholic organization, and the other for some sweet old ladies. Hope to do it next year. If I do, I'll keep notes on every question asked about Hollywood. People in other places don't seem to pick the same geniuses that Hollywood does. Wonder why?

Have you heard how Vic MacLaglen started that kid club of his? On Halloween, he stopped by the Tam O'Shanter drive-in for a hot dog, when 14 or 15 kids came around with soap, started to smear his car and get his goat. So he said, "Come on, kids. I'll give you a real party."

Trans-Lux

A review of the political steps and events happening since July, 1938, leading to the recent dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia occupies important footage in the current newsreels at the Trans-Lux Theater. Preparing for the threatened attacks of Hitler, France and England are seen rushing the construction of immense bomb shelters, France graduating large classes of aviation pilots and England's King and Queen and Premier Chamberlain inspecting defense equipment factories. And, in odd contrast, the King's brother and the little princesses are seen awarding prizes at a pony show; and Italy's crown princess participating in a ski meet.

March of Time's episodes, "Young America" and "Mexico's New Crisis," also in the program, inform, inspire and stimulate thought on two timely and vital questions of the day.

Sport lovers get a rare treat from a "short" entitled "On the Wing," in which hunting celebrities, assisted by champion Chesapeake retrievers are caught bagging their wild geese allotment; and also from a news shot of hauling steelhead trout on the Skagit River.

WASHINGTON GETS HOCKEY FRANCHISE

D. C. Sextet To Compete In Eastern

Riverside Promoter Lands Berth for Next Year; Orioles Play Gulls Tonight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Organized hockey next season was assured for Washington last night when Ray Alvis, promoter of the ice sport at Riverside Stadium, announced that he had been awarded a franchise in the Eastern League.

The announcement came on the eve of the last exhibition match of the season between the Baltimore Orioles and Atlantic City Sea Gulls, who are scheduled to face-off at 8:30 o'clock. Action may be delayed 15 minutes to insure a smooth-skating surface if warm weather prevails.

Thus, the teams that meet tonight will be regular visitors next season, opposing a Washington sextet in regular cup competition. The New York Rovers, league champions, and Hershey amateurs are other leading outfits on the circuit.

Installation of an Eastern League franchise ostensibly forestalls the possibility of establishing a major league franchise—or any other minor league franchise here, without the consent and permission of the Eastern League, because of a territorial agreement existing between hockey organizations.

Major Hockey Later

Alvis, however, announced that the Eastern League set-up eventually will give way to a major league team when larger facilities become available for the sport. His plan is to have the teams alternate at home, with the Eastern sextet acting as a farm for the major league club.

In Atlantic City the fans tonight will see one of the oldest clubs on the circuit, as well as one of the most daring. The Gulls are strictly an offensive outfit, preferring a fast, hard-skating game to "wait and see" tactics. Their most recent effort resulted in a 3-1 victory over the champion Rovers, and they confidently expect to hand the Orioles a similar dose.

This will be the eighty-fourth meeting between the teams, with Baltimore holding a comfortable lead in the series, although a majority of the games were close, gruelling affairs. In Herb Foster the Gulls present a veteran with seven years' service on the circuit and one of its high scorers this year. Foster's 72 goals put him a step behind Norman Calladine, Baltimore ace, whose total of 73 points is a new record for the league.

Calladine Lost

Alvis, incidentally, made a flattering offer for Calladine in hope of building the Washington Club around him next season, but the Canadian sharpshooter is headed for a major league berth.

Ty Anderson, who has been with Atlantic City since its organization nine years ago, has been on every all-league team since 1932, and virtually is assured of his old berth on the select sextet this year. Jack McKinnon, crack center, is another who has worn the Gulls spangels since the seaside resort went in for the game.

Another distinction claimed by the visitors is that Maury Courtea, their goalie, is the lone cage-tender to score in the history of the sport. It was a freak goal, of course, but counted, nevertheless.

Baltimore will use the same six that found favor with District fans in their first match here two weeks ago, with Omar Kelly at goal; Aud Tuten and Fred Toth, defense; Calladine, center; Ned Vitarelli and Doug Gregi, wings.

Preparations have been made to accommodate 8,000 fans.

A heavy advance sale was reported from the stadium, but officials said plenty of good seats were still available. The Orioles have come to be recognized as more or less of the home team in its matches and will not want for moral support.

Wasdell's Work Pleases Manager Harris

Putting Some 'Oomph' in Training Camp Work Down in Dixie

Improvement At Plate Is Main Factor

Nats' Manager Sure First Sacker Will Deliver; Fielding Is Up to Par

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 20.—Stanley Raymond Harris, who manages the Nats, took time out in his praise of his young pitching talent today to confess another source of satisfaction. He talked of Jimmy Wasdell.

"He's the fellow who may be important to us," said Harris. "More important than some of these young pitchers. And from what I've seen of Wasdell this spring we won't miss Zeke Bonura. In fact we may be thankful he's gone."

Wasdell thus far is promising the Nats not only adequate first base protection, but brilliant work. Always a sound fielder, he has been a bit on the fancy side this spring. But it has been his hitting that intrigues Harris.

"He's taking a nice cut and meeting the ball well," said Harris. "I think he's cured of that one-handed stroke. Even when he hasn't been making his hits, he's been meeting the ball. He was always a good hitter in the minors. Maybe this is his year to help us."

Wasdell Is Set

Harris has had no reason to feel any pain concerning Wasdell at this point. The chubby little fellow has made stops around the bag that Bonura couldn't have reached with a string of bats, and he has, indeed, been hitting.

The Nats are placing their full faith in Wasdell. Mickey Vernon, the only other first baseman in camp, does not appear to have a chance to oust the long-hitting Jimmy. Because he has yet to prove himself a big league hitter, Wasdell will bat seventh in the batting order. On the day that he does establish himself as a hitter he will be moved up, because Bobby Estalella is the only other man on the team who can hit a ball as far as the 5-foot-9-inch Wasdell.

Notes of the Nats—Harris has scheduled a seven-inning game for tomorrow between the Yannigans and the regulars . . . Rookies will pitch for both sides . . . the left-handed Kirby Hayes, of Charlotte, and Joe Thum[illegible], a Baltimore right-hander, will hurl for the regulars . . . Southpaw Forrest Brewer and Bob Overstreet, a pair of former Florida leaguers, will pitch for the rookies . . . Beginning Wednesday, when the Nats meet the Minneapolis club at Daytona Beach, Harris' team will play a game every day until the season opens . . . Ken Chase and Dutch Leonard will be unveiled for the first time this season against Minneapolis . . . save for a half-dozen pitchers, today was an off-day for the Nats . . . Patty Berg's 75 Breaks Golf Record

6-Under-Par Round Paces Mid-South Tourney in N. C.

By the United Press.

Southern Pines, N. C., March 20.—Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, national champion and defending champion in the eleventh annual women's Mid-South 54-hole golf championship, today blasted out a 37-38—75, to set a new course record, in the opning round of the tournamnt.

Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, Chapel Hill, former national champion, followed Miss Berg over the 6,300-yard course in a subpar 41-36—77, six strokes under par for women, to take second place.

Mrs. Page, shooting into a chilly breeze, had trouble with her approach shots and putting on the outward nine, but recovered most of her loss coming in. She is expected to run the "school girl" a stiff race for the championship.

Alliene Hoover, Thomasville Ga., golf star, turned in an 81, for third place. Mrs. Thomas Rudel, New York, trailed by three strokes in fourth place, with an 84.

Mrs. Leo Walper, Washington, D. C., was out in 46 and back in 43 for an 89. Mrs. Walper's score tied four others for ninth place. She is here with her husband, Leo Walper, who is competing in the North South Open.

The field is made up of 60 golfers, with 18 holes scheduled for tomorrow. Finals are Wednesday.

Bedlam Reigns as Pro Golfers Point Games for North-South

By the United Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 20.—Apparent bedlam reigned on the Pinehurst Country Club's three golf courses today as more than 100 professionals and amateurs practiced everything from putting to driving as they warmed up for the annual North and South Open championship which begins tomorrow.

SHUTE

Denny Shute, fresh from a victory at St. Augustine, Fla., where he and Bill Stark, his lanky amateur partner, combined shots to take the national amateur-professional best-ball golf tournament, shot a six-under-par 66 today to take "warm up honors."

Only a few of the entrants posted their scores. Most of them were content to stay on the practice greens and iron out kinks in their game. The driving ranges were comparatively deserted as the members of the professional golf brigade practiced chip-shots and putts.

Sammy Snead, leading money winner, negotiated the wind-swept course in 71 today. Players found the course entirely too fast and workers were busy tonight sprinkling it and otherwise getting it in perfect condition for tomorrow's tourney.

Eighteen holes of the tournament will be played tomorrow, 18 Wednesday and the final 36 Thursday when medal play begins with the leading 60 players to qualify.

Shute's St. Augustine partner, Stark, a former University of Florida football star, of Jacksonville, led a field of a dozen amateurs that included Johnny Levinson, Web Hannet, Me., New England champion.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

There's nothing prettier than the first day of spring in Washington if you've got your name on a glass door.

We came down to watch Congress and to listen to the birds. It isn't a bad duet.

The sun is shining, the cherry blossoms are in bloom and so are the appropriations. Bruce Barton came down here a year ago to repeal a law a day.

Bruce practiced by tearing the leaves off an artichoke. And that's about as far as he got.

Jake Powell's Homer Features Yanks' 10-Inning 6-5 Victory

Giants Trounced, 19-2

Baton Rouge, La., March 20 (AP).—The New York Giants suffered their first defeat of the year today, but only third-stringers, coaches and scouts of Manager Bill Terry's array were involved. The winners were the Louisiana State University team, which rang in a lot of subs, too, before polishing off the professionals, 19 to 2, in seven innings.

The Giants pitchers were John Tanzy, Frank Carreyya, Ray Lucas and Tom Hafey. As Hafey is listed as a third baseman, it can be imagined what kind of game it was.

Meanwhile, Terry put the regulars through a routine Monday drill. Albin Glassop, the team's "infield insurance," missed the game because he was having a sprained right wrist X-rayed.

Buck Newsom Cuts Loose; Manager Issues Warning

By the Associated Press.

San Antonio, March 20.—Buck Newsom, St. Louis Browns' ace pitcher who came into the fold only last week, had to be cautioned today about overwork.

Buck put so much steam into his pitches in a workout, his third in uniform, that Manager Fred Haney had to call a halt after just 20 minutes. He threw curves and fast balls that kept Catcher Harold Spindel nodding his head in approval.

The Browns, setting the pace in the Grapefruit League, will attempt to take their seventh straight from the Phillies at Austin tomorrow.

Bowser Named As Head Coach At Pittsburgh

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 20.—The University of Pittsburgh's trustees tonight named Charles W. Bowser, an honor student and gridiron star at the institution from 1920 to 1923, to succeed Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland as football coach.

The board also acceded to a request of Chancellor John G. Bowman to appoint a committee to study the "entire situation" at the university in "all its phases" and report to the board as soon as possible.

Sutherland in resigning criticized the school's administration, as did Don F. Saunders, executive secretary of the general alumni association, who announced his resignation tonight.

Named to the investigating commitee were A. E. Braun, banker; A. W. Robertson, of the Westinghouse Manufacturing & Electric Co.; E. T. Weir, steel master; Norman MacLeod, Leon Falk, jr., E. R. Weidlein and C. W. Reitinger.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 20.—The $4,000 Clark Griffith cast upon the waters when he decided on the expense of an extra month's training for his young pitchers in February seems to be headed back to the Griffith coffers with handsome reutrns. At least present indications are that his expenditures will do nothing to ruin the reputation of the Old Fox as the old fox.

POVICH

As baseball outlays go, four grand isn't much money. It isn't even the waiver price that ball clubs pay a dozen times a year for washed-up old-timers who may or may not have a season of play remaining in their hides. It was merely the amount needed to cover the transportation of 22 young pitchers to the Nats' Orlando camp and pay their sustinence for the extra month of training.

This broadened program of the Griffith who is pioneering in mass trials for young talent may set an example for other big league clubs. To date, the Nats have reaped nothing but satisfaction from it. Their satisfaction is wrapped chiefly around the physiques of two young men named Roberto Ortiz and Walter Masterson. In the cases of that pair, the optimism of the Nats' bosses is almost boundless.

In the ordinary course of training-camp events, neither Masterson nor Ortiz might have had a chance to display the astounding talents they have shown in brief trials. They would have been dismissed as too green and Manager Harris forced to concentrate on getting his veterans into pitching condition. But with the Nats starting training on February 1, there was room and time for all to pitch.

Rookies Benefit by Extra Training

Thus when Harris was ready to unveil the big Cuban, Ortiz, the rookie was getting a fair chance for himself. He was fortified by six weeks of practice. When he faced the Tigers the other day, he was ready to cut loose. You know what he did that day. Not a hit off him in three innings.

Masterson's case was somewhat similar. He had never faced a big league batting order, this kid from the Philadelphia sandlots. He hadn't even pitched any sort of a game in organized baseball before he came to the Nats. Yet he went out there against the Tigers the other day at Lakeland, pitched four innings of an overtime ball game, allowed only three hits, one of which was a phoney, and should not have been scored on.

This Masterson is the particular pet of Harris. Even after the Cuban made his sensational debut against the Tigers, Harris stoutly maintained that young Masterson was the best pitching prospect of the lot. That was before Masterson showed his talents against Detroit. Why did Harris like Masterson?

"You've gotta like a kid like that. I've never seen a fellow who could do so many things with a baseball. His fast one is alive. It takes off and it dips and he even has an in-shoot. It amounts to a screwball. Any kid fresh off the sandlots who can do all these things must be some kind of a wonder. And added to that, he's intelligent."

Mack Passed Up Good Bet

Back in December, on an afternoon in Clark Griffith's little stucco office, Harris committed himself to Masterson. "Watch what I show you at Orlando this spring," he said. "I've got a young fellow who can really pitch. Nobody ever heard of him. His name is Masterson."

The lad came into the Nats' fold last August when he was ensnared by Scout Joe Cambria. Originally Masterson was scouted by Ira Thomas, of the Athletics, but Connie Mack was feeling dyspeptic or something on the day that Thomas recommended that Masterson be given a bonus for signing, and would have none of it. Then Cambria grabbed him for the Nats.

One of the provisions of Masterson's contract with Washington was that he accompany the team on its last Western trip. He did that, sitting on the bench, eternally watching the big-shot pitching stars of the league, noting their styles. Each day he warmed up with a batting practice catcher. And at the expense of the Washington club he gained 16 pounds on one road trip. Out there against the Tigers the other day, Masterson's poise, his confidence and his conduct was something to marvel at. Many a Washington old-timer does not have his calmness.

Cuban Sensation Is Discovered

It was on an afternoon at Griffith Stadium last winter that Harris also first mentioned the Cuban Ortiz. He received a cable from Joe Cambria asking that the Washington team post a $500 immigration bond for Ortiz whom he touted as an all-fired sensation. Harris' first reaction was: "Why don't that Cambria get me some American boys? Why does he insist on trifling around in Cuba?"

In mid-February, here, Cambria escorted his new sensation, Ortiz, into Harris' hotel room. Cambria said the fellow was an outfielder who thought he was a better pitcher. But he, like the other Cubans, could not "spik" English. Harris knew not a word of Spanish and neither did Cambria. Harris tells of the interview.

"I asked Cambria to tell him I was glad to see him. Cambria pointed his finger at me and shouted, 'He says he is glad to see you.' I could have shouted the same thing myself.

"Cambria was supposed to be the interpreter, but he know no more Spanish than I did. I said, 'Tell him to be at the ball park tomorrow morning.' "Cambria shouted in English into Ortiz's ear, 'He wants you to be at the ball park tomorrow morning. We weren't getting anywhere. It was a joke. Cambria thought if he shouted loud enough, Ortiz would understand."

Brilliant Bill De Correvont Now Just Another Grid Player

Must Earn a Berth On Northwestern's Team This Season

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 20.—Bill de Correvont has started "the big push"—and it looks like an uphill climb for him all the way.

Less than a year and a half ago de Correvont was the Nation's most widely publicized prep school player. As a halfback at Austin High School in Chicago he scored 35 touchdowns in 10 games. He looked like a "natural" to go places in the collegiate game.

Spring football practice is in full swing at Northwestern University and Bill is having his first opportunity to fulfill those glowing predictions made for him. But instead of being the sensational youngster he was in 1937 he is just another member of one of the greatest squads in Northwestern history.

Has Good Chance

De Correvont sincerely wants to make good. If the opinions of two Northwestern coaches are considered, he apparently has a better than 50-50 chance of earning a place on Northwestern's varsity next fall.

"De Correvont will be a fine runner, I'm sure," said Maury Kent, freshman coach. "He is built compactly enough to make a great ball carrier. He did most of his running around the ends in high school, but he'll learn to drive straight next fall."

Head Coach Lynn Waldorf, who watched De Correvont only once or twice last year, had this to say: "He has a lot to learn, but he's eager for knowledge and is a fine prospect. He's a swell kid and we are glad to have him. How good a football player he will be, I don't know, but he'll get every chance to make good."

Must Fight Way Up

To make good, Bill will have to fight his way to the top. In addition to 40 candidates coming up from the freshman squad, 78 men are listed as returning from the 1938 roster. Of the nine letter-winners who will not be back, only four could be rated as first stringers, leaving an amazing array of talent.

De Correvont will go after a left halfback job—and has these veterans to battle: Jack Ryan, Ollie Hahnenstein, Paul Soper and Irv Madsen, all fast, hard driving ball toters. Waldorf always has liked experienced backs, so De Correvont will have to show plenty to win a regular berth.

All Bill has to say about it is "I'll be in there battling."

Twin Horses Run At Fair Grounds, But Fail to Pay

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, March 20.—The rarity of twins running against each other in the same race happened at Fair Grounds race track today, but the unusual occurrence failed to pay dividends because both finished among the also rans.

Goldman and Ducmiss, offspring of Goldbound, by Breadman, five years ago, became unusual when both survived, more unusual when both got to the races, nearly unique when both became winners, and today they raced against each other. Goldman won 3 of 7 races last year, Ducmiss won 3 times in 13 starts.

Recently, through claims, both were in the same barn here, but today Goldman ran in the interest of Mrs. A. R. Smith and Ducmiss ran for H. C. Hoffman.

Field Narrows in Title Play-Offs; Powell Is Victorious; Regal Beats St. Mary's

Interior Department's Indian-studded five eliminated Greenbelt's unlimited entry in the feature title of The Washington Post-A. A. U. basketball tournament last night at Eastern gymnasium by a 43-to-35 margin.

Regal Neon and Powell Community Center advanced in the 145-pound class battles, Regal finishing with only four men, but beating St. Mary's, of Alexandria, 50 to 40, and Powell holding a 29-to-31 victory over Arlington Athletic ssociation.

New Mexico Aggies, scheduled to visit the District Thursday after competing in the Sports Writers' Tournament last night in Madison Square Garden, may meet the Dapper Dan five in an added attraction on The Post-A. A. U. card.

Merrick A. C. qualified as an opponent for Powell in the 145-pound class quarter-finals by trouncing Epsilon Mu Sigma, 42-25, leading all the way.

Interior Quintet Trims Greenbelt

Interior Department courtmen hit their hottest scoring pace of the game in the last few minutes to defeat Greenbelt's unlimited representatives, 43-35, and qualify for Friday's quarter-finals. They will meet the Army Medico-Regal Clothiers winner.

Greenbelt tied the score four times in the first half, but trailed, 21-17, at halftime. The count was knotted again in the second period at 25, 30 and 32, all before Ray and Cornelius, Indian members of the winners led the late attack that accounted for the 8-point margin.

Ironteeth was another Indian member of the winners in a star role, with 10 points, while the individual stars of the suburbanites were Mickey McDonald, Chester Wurl and Johnny Bozek.

Regal Neon Victor Despite Handicap

Regal-Neon's 145-pound contenders, forced to play with only four men during the closing minutes of their contest with St. Mary's, defeated the Alexandrians, 50 to 40, after nearly wasting an ample half-time lead.

Leonard Katz and Bob Berry led the Regals to a 30-12 margin at half time, and when the lead stood at 36-20, Littman went out on four fouls. The eventual winners had no substitutes and played with four men, with St. Mary's creeping within six points. Then Katz and Berry, who scored 16 points each, led a scoring spurt that clinched the victory. Ralph Lazear was the all-round star for the losers.

Fanning, a former Central High center, was easily high-point man with his 16 points, no other player in the game being able to account for more than six. The triumph of Powell kept the trio of teams coached by Phil Fox intact, none of them having been beaten yet.

Famous Artists Lend Their Talents to Wildlife Week Stamps

One of the most gorgeously colored stamps in the series which will be distributed by National Wildlife Federation during Wildlife Week, which started yesterday and will last through Saturday, is this painting by Fred Everett. It is a muskellunge, a leaping fish which devours anything that will fit into its huge jaws. The needle-like fangs in those jaws are continually being renewed, causing some experts to believe that the fish sheds its teeth like a snake sheds its skin.

Leslie Ragan's conception of a Monterey cypress, another of the Wildlife Stamp scenes. Along with 95 other paintings of life in the raw, transferred to stamps and being sold throughout the country to raise money to conserve United States wild life, this scene has an interesting background. The Monterey cypress was supposed to have been brought across the Pacific in an open boat by Buddist monks from Thibet

One of fiercest beasts native to the United States, the cougar also goes on a stamp for the Wildlife Week collection. Known as the puma, panther, mountain lion and catamount, the cougar does not prey on humah beings, but rather on deer and other larger animals. Its blood-chilling squeal is probably why it has been feared by hunters and tourists. Morgan Stinemetz did this likeness for National Wildlife

On the Line

With Considine

New York, March 20.—We bumped into Jim Farley the other day, and a great crease of worry lined the Cabinet officer's forehead. The world crisis hung heavily from the statesman's shoulders. The man whose hand holds a spoke in the steering wheel of state paced to and fro, as empires fell, and dynasties crumbled. And the little knot of sportswriters hung near with pencils poised, ready to catch the fateful ultimatum about to fall from the great man's lips.

CONSIDINE

"What's all this I read about Gehrig's legs?" the Postmaster General boomed.

Somebody said they must be pretty wobbly.

"I can't understand that," Farley said, shaking his head as he recalled the granite-like limbs that propelled Lou since June, of 1925, without missing a ball game. "He always appeared to me to be a fellow who'd decline so slowly you wouldn't even notice it. I can't think that one bad year—if it was bad—means much in Lou's life. Wouldn't surprise me a bit if he played the full 154-game schedule this year," mused the old Haverstraw first baseman, loyally.

Two Other Farley Notes:

The former New York State boxing solon would like to deny charges that he was instrumental in driving the first Dempsey-Tunney fight out of New York. This has been mentioned in a number of recent tracts.

"All I did was try to carry out the ruling of a previous commission," Farley says, chuckling over those hectic by-gone days. "And besides, they had promised to fight Wills and we were trying to make them keep their word.

The President was all in favor of issuing the forthcoming baseball stamp, Jim reveals. "I went to him and said, 'Holy jumping jeepers, I want to sponsor at least one stamp while I've got this job,'" Farley laughs. "He was all for it. Left it up to me. I'm going to decide on it this week or next."

"Who's your choice, Mr. Farley?" a reporter asked him.

Jim creased his pan into a diplomatic smile, full of friendliness and revealing a minimum of information. "I can't say," he chuckled. "I have an idea, though, that nobody's picture is going to be on it. Too much controversey can cme from doing that."

Manager Eddie Mead Is Surprised

Portly Eddie Mead, the manager of the boxing game's double champion, Henry Armstrong, can't understand the boys who say that Armstrong will be disqualified when he defends his welterweight title in London late in May.

"You'd think the fellow was going to Siberia or China, the way some of you guys have been predicting that he's going to be robbed," Mead protested. "How many American champions have been robbed in England? Mickey Walker, John Henry Lewis, Freddy Miller Midget Wolgast and Pete Herman fought over there, and they came back with their titles intact.

I wouldn't be surprised if they appreciate Henry more in England than they even do in this country," Mead allowed. "After all that's the home of boxing. I know they appreciate little things like footwork and feinting more over there than they do over here. Henry'll be right down their alley, with the head-bobbing and feinting. I know they'll give him a fair shake, or I wouldn't be taking him over there."

Dapper Dans Battle Chambers In Post Tournament Tonight

With Delaware & Hudson and the United Dapper Dans scheduled to meet formidable opponents, tonight's program in The Post—A. A. U. tournament being conducted at the new Eastern High gymnasium is considered the best to date in the thrilling championship play. Delaware & Hudson's star-studded line-up barely escaped elimination at the hands of the Merrick Boys Club last week and the Stouffer's Park and Dine team, composed of former American U. players, aims to upset D. and H. tonight.

Dapper Dan has scored two easy tournament victories, downing Fort Hunt and York Haberdasher by large scores, but the defeat of the Dans in the Middle Atlantic play at Heurich's has been a tonic to the W. W. Chambers team. The Undertakers will be out tonight to spring the biggest surprise of the tournament.

Three other games are carded for tonight. Two interesting 120-pound games on the north and south courts will open the program. The crack Gonzaga Bantams will tackle the Leland Junior High team, while the Central Boys Club Trojans will meet the Southeast Boys Club. In the other game, at 8 p. m., Alexandria Boys Club battles Georgetown Boys Club in a 145-pound struggle.

Chambers Five Ready

W. W. Chambers' club, with Williamson, Beach, Mostow and others groomed for the battle, can be expected to give Dapper Dan a rough, tough game. The players are not afraid of the big names on Dapper Dan and warmed up for the game by trouncing Mount Vernon, 40-28, in the first round. Chambers has bowed twice this season to Dapper Dan but the latter's defeat in the Middle Atlantic play has served as a tonic for the Undertakers.

Dapper Dan, with Jack Butterworth, Ollie Tipton and the others ready, hope to erase Chambers with the same ease that it has taken two other foes into camp.

The American U. combination that makes up Stouffer's is a serious threat to Delaware & Hudson. The latter club downed Merrick Boys' Club only 44-37 in that recent tournament game and lost in the Mid-

Silva Whips Galiano In Gory Arena Fight

Crowd in Uproar as Pair Stand Head To Head and Slug throughout 10-Round Fight; Both Suffer Cut Eyes

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Mexican Joey Silva gave away 8 pounds last night, then came through with a smashing victory over Pete Galiano in a gory battle at Turner's Arena.

It was the most savage fight witnessed at the arena since the sport moved in. They used every artifice known to boxing in a struggle for survival.

Two bulldogs locked in a death struggle couldn't have fought more ferociously. Blood oozed down the distorted features of both. The fighters stood toe-to-toe and slugged, not once, or twice, but continually. Neither took a backward step during the entire ten rounds.

Galiano, the sharper puncher of the two, ripped crushing rights and lefts to the Mexican's head time and again as Silva came boring in, but failed to dampen his enthusiasm. Silva threw both hands to the Italian's head, beat a steady tatoo of leather on his ribs until they glowed with a fiery red color but couldn't feaze him.

Audience Really Approves

The slim audience roared its approval of the gruelling affair round after round, and at the finish they gave both boys the longest, most appreciative hand ever accorded two gladiators.

Galiano used his elbows in the first two rounds, and butted open Silva's left eye in the third, and the Mexican retaliated by punching low and hard below the belt in the fifth. He was penalized for these tactics, but the three points deducted only evened the round.

Every round was a repetition of the previous one. Silva rushed out of his corner, met Galiano before he was half way across the ring and pumped both hands to the body. They laid their heads on one another's shoulders and started pounding on the body. Then Galiano would suddenly step back, hook viciously to the head with a right and left, and Silva taking both without apparent effect, would step back in with an equally vicious uppercut to the jaw.

They had a particularly brisk exchange immediately before the bell ending the ninth round, and Galiano inadvertantly punched twice when the gong sounded. Sylva, taking this as a deliberate slight, tore after him, landed a savage right smash under the heart and was preparing to dig in for a long siege when pulled away by the referee.

Wills Beats Finazzo

Frankie Wills (143) eked out a majority decision over 18-year-old Eddie Finazzo (143), of Baltimore, in the six-round hemifinal.

Wills, who earned no better than a draw on The Post's scoresheet, faded badly after the third round, as Finazzo continued to absorb his best punches and kept boring in with a punishing body attack.

Wills was hanging on at the end of the fifth round, his mid-section a glowing tomato-red color, and his morale at low ebb. He twisted half around as if to take Finazzo's punches on his back as the Baltimorian waded in.

Finazzo took a number of solid rights to the jaw in the earlier rounds, and during a mild rally engineered by his opponent, in the sixth, but refused to give ground.

In other preliminaries Billy Hatcher (123½) outpointed Pewee Frankman (120) Billy Selvage (128¾) won a unanimous decision over Billy Pickeral (128¾), after flooring him twice in the third round; Sam Williams (160) took a disputed decision over Battling Zuzu (166). All were four-rounders.

City-Wide Tourney Opens Tonight

A current sensation of Post-A. A. U. basketball play, Jewish Community Center's flashy five, plays in the feature game of the Community Center City-Wide Tournament tonight at Tech, meeting the D. C. Commissioners of the Hine League at 8 p. m.

In theopening engagement, at 7 o'clock, Mount Vernon cagers tangle with Maritime Commission of the Macfarland league. Mount Vernon was a finalist in last year's event, a fact together with its fine showing this year which has made it a strong favorite in the tourney. The final contest of the night will be between Bell Clothiers of the Eastern League and Interstate Commerce at 9 p. m.

Atchison-Keller, Coffey Sales and Railroad Retirement are already in the quarter-finals, awaiting the outcome of tonight's games for their next opponents.

George West Planning To Leave Roosevelt

Riders' All-High Forward Expected to Transfer to Episcopal Next Season; Considers Fishburne Also; Hurts Team's Chances

By Bill Burnett.

Roosevelt High School's chances of taking the interhigh basketball crown in 1940—it hasn't finished first in the annual race since the spring of 1919—were seriously dampened yesterday with the announcement that George West, All-High forward for the past two seasons, will not return to the Rider cage squad next year.

According to his mother, the tow-headed potshot artist will probably do his court work at Episcopal High, in Alexandria, during the 1939-40 cage season. There was a slight chance of his attending Fishbourne Military Academy, Va., but Episcopal seemed to have the inside track.

WEST

The transfer of Coach Herman Littman's prize scoremaker to the Virginia school followed a year of dissatisfaction on West's part. A climax was reached late in the season when the Rider squad went through such an upheaval that Hymie Perlo, another brilliant forward, was tossed off the club and the rest of the outfit threatened to quit unless he was reinstated.

"George didn't want to go to Roosevelt in the first place," his mother said yesterday. "His father and I prevailed on him to go because it was so near home. After the Perlo affair, however, we promised he could go anywhere next year if he finished out the year at Roosevelt. Episcopal seems to be his choice."

With West taking his trunks and sneakers elsewhere, Roosevelt will be forced to put off winning a crown. George Zuras, the only senior on the club that provided this year's cage fans their major disappointment, will be graduated, but other members may also move on to greener pastures.

Two Local Riflists On Culver Title Team

Richard I. Paul, of 6413 Thirty-first place, Washington, and Bob A. Plachta, of Quantico, were members of the Culver Military Academy rifle team which won its fifth Fifth Corps Area intercollegiate championship in six years last week.

Haskell Indians, Once Grid Terrors, Quits Major Ranks

By the Associated Press.

Lawrence, Kans., March 20.—Haskell Indian Institute, once one of the mighty teams in football, bowed completely out of the big time today with official announcement that hereafter the school would meet only prep teams on the gridiron.

In its years as one of the country's big Indian colleges, Haskell played the big schools with no quarter asked or given. With such stars as Rabbit Weller and the Levi brothers in its line-ups, Haskell took on Notre Dame, teams of the Big Six, the Big Ten and many Eastern schools.

Mel Shorey, Bass Victors In Pro Play

Win Pro-Pro Event At Rolling Road; P. G. A. Meeting Set

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Catonsville, Md., March 20.—Mel Shorey, East Potomac professional, and Johnny Bass, Clifton Park, Baltimore, mentor, played perfect partners here today over the Rolling Road course and paced in informal Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-pro tourney with a best ball of 64. Bass matched par figures with a 70 and Shorey, who had a 72 helped on six holes, including four birdies.

President Ralph Beach set April 3 as the date for the annual meeting for the purpose of drawing up a schedule of events. The pros will meet at Indian Spring, play a pro-amateur tourney, with the simon-pures competing from scratch, and set a date for the local P. G. A. championship and other events.

District professionals will meet, probably at Kenwood, between now and the Indian Spring conclave, and decide whether to draw up a schedule of their own that will not conflict with the sectional affairs.

Several minor matters were discussed, including the approval of Tommy Doerer's tournament at East Potomac either immediately before or after the National Open in Philadelphia, when Doerer plans to have at least 20 of the "name" pros compete with the local mentors in a sweepstakes at the District course.

Bass had two partners in the pro-sweeps and finished second with Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam mentor, as a partner. George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, and John Flattery, Rodgers Forge, were next with 67, and Al Houghton, unattached, and Alex Taylor, of the host club, were other 70-breakers with a 69.

Bass and Diffenbaugh divided first-place money in the individual sweepstakes, the latter playing the first nine in two-under-par 33 and coming back in 37 for a 70 that duplicated the par effort of Bass. Shorey and Houghton had 72 and Spencer 75 in other sweeps cards posted.

Other scores in the two-ball play included Tommy Ryan, Belle Haven, and Willie Schreiber, Mount Pleasant, tying Jimmy Flattery, Baltimore C. C., and Charley Betschler, Hillendale, with 73s, and Bob Williams, Annapolis, pairing with Frank Invernezzi, Forest Park, for a 75.

Petee Gene, Paying $9.60, Wins Feature at Tropical Park

Choices Fail As Long Shots Have Big Day

Billabong, Favorite, Finishes Seventh in Top Race on Weak Program in Florida

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 20.—Long shots ran rampant and favorites performed as if they were homesick for the North here this afternoon. Ordinary horses provided the sport, the card being left without a feature when the original fifth event was called off because of withdrawals and a cheap claiming contest substituted.

The Snow White Stable's Petee Gene won the mile and 70 yards sixth race, most attractive on the card, and became the nearest thing to a favorite to make good in a half dozen events. Petee was a $9.60-for-$2 second choice to Billabong, which finished a dismal seventh in the field of 11 $2,000 platers.

"Chuck" Charlton, scoring his second straight triumph and taking the lead for the meeting from Jimmy Ashcroft, 17 winners to 16, drove Petee Gene over the wire a length and a half clear of Mrs. W. H. Crane's Amercup. The latter headed the Ector Stable's Black Crusade out of second money. The time was 1:45 1-5. The track was fast, it having dried out quickly under a warm sun and wind, following rain the night before.

The usual long shot victory opened the card. Charmed One, although a winner in his last two trips to the post, drew light backing in the 6 furlong curtain-raiser. He won by a half length and returned $23.90 for two.

Favorite Edged Out

Bareback was an easy second, three lengths before Velvet Mask. Wha Hae, the favorite, was edged out of the show after racing forwardly. Bareback set the pace, while Charmed One was improving his position at each pole. The leader's daylight advantage gradually diminished in the final quarter mile. He could not withstand the steady challenge of Charmed One, which finished in 1:12 1-5.

Running one of the most remarkable races of the season, the $21.40-for-$2 chance, Free Child, took the second purse in a blanket finish. Last in the field of 11 leaving the backstretch, the gelding worked his way through on the inside, and gaining a narrow lead in the stretch drive, he lasted to register by a head. Crowning Glory came from close behind the leaders to land the place by a half length, while Cautivo, the early pacemaker, was third. Glenbroom, favorite with Don Meade up, broke slowly and never reached contention.

$58.30 Shot Wins

The third event, for 2-year-old platers, brought about one more upset for the records. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Mimosa, unable to get in the money in five previous engagements, drove up in time to take a photo victory at odds of $58.30 for $2. Fortunate Boop, a well-liked newcomer, made the running and only lost in the last stride while nosing out Proud Lass for the place. Brilliant Gold, heavily backed favorite, tired right out of the picture chasing Fortunate Boop, while Gaudy, second in demand, was outrun all the way.

The latter found his stride rapidly, drew out into a good lead through the early stages, but faltered in the final drive. VELVET MASK, well up on the outside, finished gamely and outlasted WHA HAE in the stretch run. WHA HAE, going in pursuit of the leader early, faltered when placed to punishment.

CAUTIVO broke fast, showed good speed and drew out rounding the turn, but faltered in the final drive. SPANDAU, well up on the inside, came to the outside on the stretch turn, made a game effort, but hung in the stretch run. GLENBROOM lacked speed and was outrun the entire trip.

MIMOSA, a forward contender on the outside, gained with determination under extreme pressure through the stretch and wore her opposition down in the last strides. FORTUNATE BOOP broke forwardly, took a short lead rounding the turn, continued gamely when challenged, but could not stave off the winner's bid. PROUD LASS, a keen contender and saving the most ground, held on well in the final drive. BRILLIANT GOLD, in the thick of contention for 3 furlongs, stopped badly in the stretch run.

DENOTE found her stride rapidly and, going in her best form, opened up a good lead rounding the turn, continued gamely when placed to pressure and held OKLAB safe at the end. OKLAB, vigorously ridden, saved much ground, but was unable to improve his position. MYRNA LEE, prominent contender from the start, held on with good courage in the final drive.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEEBAG, $18.20, $7.90, $4.90; SWIFTNESS, $6.30, $3.90; STEARS, $5.20.

WEEBAG, running in her best form, followed the leaders close up under light restraint to the stretch turn. She took command with a rush and drew out rapidly, but was under mild urging at the finish. SWIFTNESS, on the outside and prominent contender throughout, closed stoutly and shook off STEARS in the stretch run. STEARS broke fast, showed good speed and ran RACEAWAY into defeat the opening half mile. He then faltered.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:42. Winner, Snow White Stable's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETEE GENE, $9.60, $5.50, $4.20; AMERICUP, $9.30, $7.80; BLACK CRUSADE, $19.30.

PETEE GENE, in tight quarters after entering the backstretch, saved ground rounding the lower turn and, slipping through between the leaders entering the stretch, drew out and held away to the end. AMERICUP, under light restraint, moved up early and steadily on the outside after leaving the backstretch and outlasted BLACK CRUSADE in the final drive. BLACK CRUSADE, crowded back in the opening furlong, saved ground in the last half mile, gradually bettered his position while saving ground and finished gamely.

SEVENTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:09. Off at 5:10½. Winner, I. Bieber's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ESPINACA, $3.40, $2.90, $2.50; ONLY SON, $7.00, $4.20; MEXICO CITY, $3.50.

ESPINACA, pinched back going to the first turn, was compelled to race wide to obtain a position in the opening half mile. He responded courageously when placed to pressure and outlasted ONLY SON in the final drive. ONLY SON, under steadying restraint early, moved up strongly on the outside entering the stretch and was wearing the winner down at the finish. MEXICO CITY forced a steady pace and raced BARBARA A. into defeat. BARBARA A. led, but weakened in the stretch run.

EIGHTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but BOB C. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:39. CANDY HERO, away forwardly, was hustled to the front, raced DALAMAC and WULFSTAN into defeat, continuing with determination when the final test came and outlasted his opposition. ASSIST, going well up under steadying restraint early, moved up samely on the outside of the leader entering the stretch, but then hung in the stretch run. MISS LIZZIE rated off the leaders until straightened into the stretch, closed with a rush on the outside and would have won in a few more strides.

Dear Al,

Handicappers are not always impressed with the record of a 2-year-old when, a year later, they are considering him as a possible starter in the Kentucky Derby. The number of races won, and the amount of money won as a 2-year-old—that, of course, receives some consideration. But not too much. The experts put infinitely greater stress in the form charts which reveal how each horse was running through the last furlong of a sprint. If he is holding the early speed, or even stepping it up, and closing plenty of ground, they recognize him as a thoroughbred with stamina, and one with probable ability to do great things over the mile-and-a-quarter Derby route. The record of the 2-year-olds of 1938 makes El Chica a very outstanding horse for the Derby of 1933. He started seven times—won all seven. He won more money than any other 2-year-old. He always finished the sprints as if he would relish going much farther. Therefore, he cannot be denied top ranking as a 1939 Kentucky Derby eligible. So far as the Derby is concerned at this time, second position—just back of El Chico—goes to Eight Thirty, which finished a bad tenth among the money winners, and won only 3 times in 7 starts. Xalapa Clown, which won only $7,400 last year, is rated fifth—ahead of Challedon, which won $67,700. Benefactor, winner of only $2,280 in 1938, is rated ninth for the Derby, ahead of about 50 horses which won far more money. On the other hand, horses like Heather Time, winner of $26,275, Donita M, which won $20,330; Charlotte Girl, with $19,180; Dear Diary, with $14,700 are given no definite Derby consideration, the idea being, perhaps, that these horses are strictly sprinters.

BILL.

First race—Fumble seems to be ideally placed in this field and promises to have Don Meade in the saddle. I see no reason for mistakes. Ethel's Choice is tossed in this with a mere 103 pounds and will do a lot of running. Fletus could make a money appearance.

Second race—Worthing carries top weight in this field but seems capable of handling the impost. I'm going to string along. Dinner Jacket ran a fine last and will be a factor if taken off the reserve list. Mr. Buddy promises to be close up in company of this caliber.

Third race—Equistar, a son of Equipoise, appears to be a good one off that last and may take the measure of the highly-regarded Diavolo Cliff. The latter has been doing well and is the one to beat. Mountaloon won at long odds here and should take down a portion of the money.

Fourth race—Tobacco, last on the also eligible list, will have plenty to say about the distribution of this purse if he gets into action. The 102-pound impost and Apprentice Ashcroft will help. Goodwine threatens to have Meade in the saddle and the combination should be close. Town Car to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Cuckoo has been working in excellent fashion and may be ready to step down in front of this rather formidable field. Arcaro is slated to handle the booting job. Faust and Marfeu were in excellent form last out and probably will complete the money circle.

Sixth race—Jack Patches likes this track and may find conditions to his liking. The weight and the route suits. Furfiber deserves respect in this field. If you want a shot at the moon, try Art Brown's "Four X Special," Bertillion.

Seventh race—Passing Eve seems capable of adding another purse to her long string in this distance event. She gets in with 105 pounds and I'm going to back her. The Story will do a lot of front running and Meade will try to keep him on top. Nessus is good now and could take it all.

Eighth race—Kindred Spirit has a slight edge on this kind. Meade is likely to do the riding and you know how he likes to boot them in the eighth race. Freestone and Big Victory to complete the money department.

Substitute races—If these races are used I'll take Whisper, Harpen Belle, Toby Tyler and Candar, Sweeping Flame, Milk.

Best bet—Fumble.

Two More Horses Arrive at Downs

Louisville, Ky., March 20 (AP). Xalapa Clown and Black Bun, Mrs. B. Franzheim's nominees for the Kentucky Derby, May 6, arrived at Churchill Downs over the weekend.

Xalapa Clown, one of the early favorities for the $50,000 added mile and a quarter classic for 3-year-olds, stood the cross-country trip from Santa Anita, but Black Bun had a high fever. His condition, however, was not considered dangerous.

Steel Heels, Junius Bell's derby nominee, showed up well in a prep, with a nice burst of speed over a short route, and railbirds today predicted the locally owned colt is destined to prove a "threat" for the race.

D. C. Building Contracts Gain 52% in Year

Report Discloses Valuation Jump of $7,000,000 Over 1938

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Contracts for building awarded in the local metropolitan area during February went into a climb of 52 per cent over total valuation established in that month of last year. Residential work was most active, and was followed by nonresidential. But heavy engineering construction fell off.

A monthly summary prepared by H. A. Johns, Washington manager of Dodge Reports, a division of F. W. Dodge Corporation, emphasized the currently favorable comparison between contracts awarded in the first two months of 1939 and 1938.

"A grouping of all types of building and engineering construction contracts awarded in and around Washington during January and February reveals a valuation jump of about $7,000,000 beyond the record for those months of last year," Mr. Johns said.

"Residential building contracts led the other classifications with an advance of more than $6,000,000. Nonresidential work moved ahead with a two-month margin of more than $1,000,000. Heavy engineering construction fell off with $750,000."

February contracts for all building and engineering construction, in the Washington metropolitan area of the District—comprising Arlington and Fairfax counties, Va., and Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, Md.—amounted to $5,766,000. This includes a gain of 52 per cent over $3,799,000, valuation recorded for February, 1938.

Total of contracts awarded in the first two months of 1939 was $13,143,000. Last year it was $8,424,000. Nonresidential building for which contracts were awarded in February amounted to $932,000. The corresponding 1938 total was $906,000. A gain of 3 per cent was established last month.

First two months' awards for nonresidential work were valued at $2,828,000, far ahead of $1,633,000, the 1938 total for these months. Last month's residential contracts reached $4,608,000 in an 89 per cent gain over those amounting to $2,445,000 in February of last year. In this classification, contracts in the local metropolitan area totaled $10,029,000 during the opening months of the year, the corresponding 1938 total being $3,764,000.

Heavy engineering construction in Washington, undertaken by the various governmental agencies and public utilities, accounted for February contracts totaling $228,000. The 1938 record carries the February valuation at $448,000. Engineering contracts awarded in January and February, combined, amounted to $288,000 in a long drop from those months of last year, when the total was $1,027,000.

Colonial Village Refinanced

Refinancing by private capital of Colonial Village, 1,000-unit housing development in Arlington, Va., is announced by Gustave Ring, developer, builder and owner of the project, who states that he negotiated the new loan from the New York Life Insurance Co.

Faith in the future of Washington and its suburbs was demonstrated by the insurance company in fixing the rate of interest on the new loan at 4½ per cent. Contract, however, provides that Mr. Ring shall continue to own and operate the development and it was only on this condition that the loan was arranged, it was stated.

As a result, Colonial Village, first large apartment development in this section financed through a Federal Housing Administration insured loan, is also the first to revert to private financing.

New rate of interest is reported as being ½ of 1 per cent less than the rate charged in the original financing. The Federal Housing Administration, it was explained, received this ½ of 1 per cent for insuring the loan after various bankers and builders had declared plans for the construction and operation of the project impossible of accomplishment.

Mr. Ring is now engaged in constructing a similar housing development, Arlington Village, on Columbia pike, in Arlington, Va., on which he obtained a loan of $2,385,000 from the Sun Life Insurance Co. of New York and which is insured by the Federal Housing Administration. Arlington Village homes will be ready for occupancy in July.

Reich's Steel Position Aided by Czech Absorption

Cleveland, March 20.—Germany's absorption of the remaining portion of Czecho-Slovakia further enhances the greater Reich's position as an iron and steel producer, the magazine Steel reports in its current issue. Gained in Hitler's latest coup were the Skoda Works at Plzen, the nearby Prague Iron & Steelworks Co. at Kladno, and the Vitkovice Mines, Steel & Ironworks Corporation, at Moraska Ostrava.

The Skoda company has annual capacity of 150,000 tons, produces castings, forgings, structural steel, machinery, locomotives and guns. It is considered one of the most important steel plants in central Europe. The Prague Iron & Steelworks has annual capacity of about 500,000 tons each of steel and pig iron. The Vitkovice Mines, Steel & Ironworks Corporation has capacity of 800,000 tons of steel and 750,000 tons pig iron.

While mineral resources gained were generally considered slight, Hitler's official newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, claimed iron ore deposits near Beraun would yield 500,000 tons annually. Coal mines at Kladno, it reported, would produce 2,000,000 tons, and at Dobnany, 2,000,000 to 3,00,000 tons, soft coal annually; at Maehrisch-Ostrau, 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 tons of hard coal annually. Lead, silver and gold deposits also were claimed. Copper and manganese, minerals needed by Germany, are not produced in the newly acquired territory.

This will result in the distribution of $4,800,000.

Wheat Prices Steadied by Foreign Sales

War Scare Indicates Increased Demand For U. S. Grain

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 20.—Wheat prices were steadied today by indications of improved European demand for grain in view of the political crisis abroad. Trading was restricted, however, by uncertainty over the outcome the latest war scare which for the moment is the dominating factor in the market.

Wheat fluctuated nervously within a range of only ½ cent and volume of business contracted. Prices dipped as much as ⅝ cent at times, with some long lines sold out, but selling was done cautiously.

Chicago prices wound up little changed from Saturday's close, being ⅛ off to ¼ up, May 66-68⅛, July 68⅛. Corn developed independent strength on the basis of improved export demand and closed ⅛-½ higher, May 47¾-⅞, July 49½-⅝. Oats closed ⅛ lower to ¼ higher. Rye ¼-⅝ up and lard 2 to 5 cents lower.

Favorable Domestic News Fails to Support Market Jumpy With War Fears; Treasury Bonds Are Firm

New York, March 20.—Cheerful domestic news was too meager to provide an antidote for the severe case of war jitters with which financial markets here and abroad are afflicted. Stock exchange prices were marked down for the fifth consecutive session although declines were narrow in comparison with those of last week.

Bonds were mixed on reduced volume, some of the foreign issues breaking sharply on a few sales. Treasuries stiffened and in the corporate list a small bulge in rail liens offset fractional declines in industrial and utility groups. Dealings in foreign exchange were featured by activity of control funds, despite which the Swiss franc broke 12 points to a new low for the year. Other European rates averaged higher.

Efforts to Rally Fail

Although London and Paris markets gave no incentive to the long side in Wall street, several efforts were made to rally the list on technical grounds. As no outside buying was attracted and for the reason that selling reappeared on even small bulges, these spurts were short lived. There were, however, several strong sections, including the aviations and resistant groups, including steels, rail equipments, stores and foods. Utilities showed the most definitely lower trend of any division.

War Stocks Higher

Active stocks to show losses of a point or more included American Telephone, International Harvester and Westinghouse. On the other hand, Du Pont, Bethlehem Steel and United Aircraft all were a point or more to the good, all three having a few customers with the idea they will flourish come peace or war.

The automotive group held fairly well in the face of a recurrence of selling from weak holders. General Motors was the most active issue in the group and the list ended ⅜ off, but Chrysler firmed ⅜. Montgomery Ward appeared in the most active section with a small gain following appearance of its 1938 report, showing increased earnings. United States Rubber, which opened on a block of 2,000 shares, also firmed a fraction.

Steel operations recorded a small decline that was out of line with expectations in the industry late last week, but which was sufficient to emphasize that consumer industries have not changed hand-to-mouth buying policies in effect for many months. The reply from the stock exchange to the recent criticism of SEC Chairman Douglas on the exchange liberalization proposals coincided with news that Mr. Douglas has received the expected Supreme Court appointment.

Bond Trading Irregular

Price changes in the bond market today were marked by irregularity among the several groups and volume of dealings subsided. Treasuries exhibited a generally firm tone and closing prices witnessed moderate gains over most of the active isues in the list.

Foreign Issues Weak

Foreign obligations were inclined to weakness in a number of sections, with new lows for the year recorded and large losses for the day appearing. Among the weak spots were certain Belgian and Bulgarian issues, along with Prague 7½s, which sold down 18 points. Canadian, Chilean, Italian, Hungarian, German and Japanese bonds also were affected by the selling.

Some strength in domestic rails was the principal factor in keeping the domestic average of 30 issues slightly above the previous closing levels. Among the carrier issues the best performers included some of the New York Central and Delaware & Hudson obligations. Secondary rails were steady, exhibiting none of the strength of the remainder of the section.

Montg. Ward Reports Net of $3.50 a Share

Compares With an Income of $3.41 a Share in 1937

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 20.—Montgomery Ward reported today a net profit of $19,644,956 for the year ended January 31, slightly higher than the net of $19,210,029 for the previous year. The earnings were equal to $3.50 a share, compared with $3.41 the previous year.

Net sales were $413,961,000, compared with $414,091,000 the previous year, a slight decline which Avery said was attributable "to lower selling prices inasmuch as the quantities sold were approximately 5 per cent greater."

"The favorable trend during the last six months is indicated by the improvement of 6 per cent in sales over the same period of the prior year, compared with a decline of nearly 7 per cent during the first half of the year," Avery said.

New York, March 20 (AP).—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is appropriating $2,500,000 for advertising its motion pictures, the largest appropriation in its history, Howard Dietz, director of publicity, announced today.

Newspapers will receive greater emphasis in M.-G.-M. advertising than last year, said Dietz, adding the money would be spent in every sizeable city in the United States.

C.&O. Stockholders Notified Young To Get Its Vote

Cleveland, March 20 (AP).—The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway management notified stockholders today it proposes to vote for Robert R. Young, chairman of Alleghany Corporation, and for all other present C. & O. directors at the annual meeting April 18 in Richmond, Va.

A month ago President George D. Brooke and Chairman Herbert Fitzpatrick led a move which placed on the board Homer L. Ferguson, Newport News (Va.) Shipbuilding Co. president, and Ralph C. Gifford, Louisville banker. Young protested adding to the board, and expressed fear he himself might be displaced. Alleghany nominally is top holding company of the former Van Sweringen system, including C. & O.

The proxy statement issued today said designation of Ferguson and Gifford "as a possible candidate for the office of director originated with the board of directors" and that the names were placed in nomination by Brooke.

April Fuel Demand Expected to Jump 7%

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Mines estimated the April motor fuel demand at 46,300,000 barrels today, an increase of 7 per cent over the same month last year. "The principal cause," the bureau said, "rests in improved business conditions combined with an upward trend in motor fuel demand per motor vehicle."

Estimated daily average supply of domestic crude oil for April was 3,434,000 an increase of 3 per cent over March but a decline of 1 per cent from last April market demand.

Down in Front

With Richards Vidmer

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 20.—One day last week the Boston Red Sox came up here from their training base at Sarasota to play an exhibition game with the St. Louis Cardinals. The native crackers and winter visitors turned out early to see the pre-game practice and catch a close-up view of such famous figures as Jimmy Foxx, Lefty Grove, Joe Cronin, Vosmik, Cramer and the others who wear the Red Sox regalia.

VIDMER

The wooden stands were crowded early, and in the crowd sat a stocky, square-shouldered young man in his early thirties peering as eagerly as any at the athletes on the field. He sat on one of the hard wooden seats in the stands, not in a front-line box. He wore a tan jacket over a sport shirt thrown open at the throat. He gave all outward appearance of being just another visitor who was grasping the chance to see a couple of big league clubs in action.

Yet appearances were deceiving, for this young man not only can see big league baseball every day, and knows a lot of the players intimately, but controls the destinies of many of them. This young man was Thomas A. Yawkey, Yale graduate, multimillionaire sportsman and owner of the Boston Red Sox.

Was an Athletic Star

Tom Yawkey, as an undergraduate at Yale, played baseball and football. He wasn't a star at either, but loved both. And soon after he was graduated he felt the urge to own a big league club. At the time the Red Sox were a hopeless outfit. For 12 years they had trailed the American League parade. They had finished last nine times, seventh twice and the other season could climb no higher than sixth.

The Red Sox had no ball players of any consequence and practically no patronage. But they were for sale and Tom Yawkey wanted to own a big league club. So he paid a million dollars, more or less, and acquired the franchise.

Ambition Undimmed

Then he started buying players at fancy prices. For Tom Yawkey didn't want just a baseball club—he wanted a winner—and his slogan was "hang the expense!" He wrote checks right and left. He paid prices never heard of before in the open market for established stars, but pennants can't be bought in this game; pennant winners must be built.

So in five years Tom Yawkey has owned a ball club, but he still hasn't won a pennant. He finished fourth the first couple of years, then dropped to sixth, climbed to fifth and last year his club wound up just behind the Yankees in second place.

One might think that Tom Yawkey would be willing to chuck the whole business after five futile years. One might imagine that he would have lost his enthusiasm in five years of failure. But as Tom Yawkey sat on the hard wooden seat at Waterfront Park and peered at the practice, munching peanuts like any other fan, his eyes glowed with the light of genuine enjoyment.

"Some men get their fun out of owning racing stables," he said. "Some back Broadway shows and others spend fortunes on polo ponies. I just happen to like baseball, and if I lose a little money owning a club, that's all right. After all, it's my money. Besides, I'm not in this game to make a profit. I'm in it simply for the fun I get out of it."

Washington in the second round of the tournament.

Both survivors of these unlimited class battles will gain a place in the semifinals.

The program for Wednesday night is promising. The Regal Clothiers, runners-up by their sensational play in the Middle Atlantic tournament, will meet the Army Medicos. Regal downed Cal's Valet, 39-25, in its first tournament appearance, while the Army Medicos took care of the Georgetown Intermural Five, 43-34. In a cofeature, Bolling Field, now involved in a play-off for the U. S. Government League title, will face Police Boys' Club. Bolling Field eliminated Eckington A. C. in the first round, while Police Boys' Club advanced at the expense of Railroad Retirement Board.

The usual nominal admission price of 25 cents will be charged at these programs.

It was the fourth consecutive defeat for the Pirates. The American Leaguers did most of their damage against Joe Bowman, who allowed three runs in the second inning and was charged with the seven tallies, although Appling's double, scoring the final two, were made against Radunich, a rookie. Joe Kuhel hit a homer in the fourth.

Lake Charles, La., March 20 (AP).—After Rabbit McDowell and Jack Graham slammed homers in the first inning, the Athletics came from behind today to beat Fort Worth, of the Texas League, 8 to 2.

The A's tied it up in the first on a base on balls, Lodigiani's triple and an outfield fly. Brucker's double in the third scored two runs to put the American Leaguers ahead. They added four more tallies in the fourth for good measure.

Tigers Battle for Jobs

Lakeland, Fla., March 20 (AP).—The fight for a utility job in the Detroit Tiger infield was continued today by Mark Christman, last year's regular third sacker, and recruit Benny McCoy, second baseman. The Tigers play the St. Louis Cardinals at St. Petersburg, Fla., tomorrow and Christman and McCoy are to start. Hank Greenberg, Charley Gehringer, Frank Croucher, Billy Rogell and Frank Higgins are certain to be retained, Manager Del Baker has indicated, with Rogell and Croucher alternating at shortstop.

Reds Given Rest

Tampa, Fla., March 20 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds were out fishing and lolling on the beaches today, enjoying their first full day of rest since the training season started.

Physicians informed Manager Bill McKechnie that Johnny (No Hit) Vander Meer, taken to the hospital with an inflamed appendix, should be out by Thursday. Vander Meer will work out with the Indianapolis club at Bartow if he is unable to leave with the club on its northern trek April 2.

Cub Homers Win

Los Angeles, March 20 (AP).—Two home runs with the bases loaded gave the Chicago Cubs a 9-to4 victory today over the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League, the National Leaguers' fifth straight decision in the grapefruit circuit.

Billy Herman, second baseman, lifted a homer over the leftfield barrier in the fifth, scoring Mesner, Lee and Hack ahead of him. Two innings later First Baseman Phil Cavarretta duplicated the feat, sending English, Russell and Gleeson across the plate.

The Cub pitching burden was shared by Bill Lee, ace of the National League last season, and Al Epperly, rookie. The Coast team got four hits off Lee in five innings and three off Epperly in four innings.

Rookie's Homer Wins

Sarasota, Fla., March 20 (AP).—Jim Tabor, freshman third sacker and only first-stringer in the lineup, broke a 7-7 tie with a sixth-inning homer today when the Boston Red Sox defeated their Louisville farmhands, 10-7, in a free-hitting game.

The American Association youngster made all of their ten hits and seven runs against Jake Wade, erstwhile Detroit southpaw, and Frankie Dasso. The latter was tendered a hot reception when he took over the mound in the fourth, for the Colonels set off a four-run burst against him. Righthander Bill Sayles worked the last four innings for the Sockers and held the Colonels hitless.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

For the first time in the history of tournament ranking, put on by experts and writers each spring, a woman is in second position. Mrs. Ralph C. Young, of Philadelphia, has dethroned the mighty Aces and placed second only to her partner and teacher, Charles H. Goren, in Shepard Barclay's ranking in "Collier's Weekly."

Barclay places Goren first and Mrs. Young second by virtue of the fact that of the 11 national contests sponsored by the American Contract Bridge League, only Mrs. Young and Goren were successful in winning three of the titles.

Here is Shep's list:

1. Charles H. Goren.
2. Mrs. Ralph C. Young.
3. B. Jay Becker.
4. M. D. Maier.
5. Oswald Jacoby.
6. Howard Schenken.
7. Sherman Stearns.
8. David Bruce Burnstine.
9. Morrie Elis.
10. (Tied) Mrs. H. E. Funk, John R. Crawford, Charles J. Solomon, Mrs. A. M. Sobel, Fred D. Kaplan.

Take today's tale, for instance. Four enthusiastic gentlemen, mellowed through a generous distribution of libation, had a rousing time, stumbling through the bidding of a small slam and seeing it made, doubled, though the ace and queen of trumps and another ace and king, all winners, were outstanding.

It is needless to assure you that the lucky North-South players did not pull the extra tricks like rabbits out of their hats as the experts are wont to do, nor did they mistake the score. There is only one explanation to this strange caprice of fate, and that is the incurring of not one but two revokes by the defense.

Since the atmosphere was somewhat foggy and all the players in a pleasant but slightly vague state we have been unable to piece together whether that most miserable of mortals, the West player of the story, was so nervous he successively pulled the wrong card or whether he was color blind.

Suffice it to say, he did revoke for cause or causes unknown. In his shame he sought to fing himself out of the nearest window, which proved to be a closet instead, and were it not for the forgiving supplications of his partner and the group's need for a fourth to continue the game, he would have remained in its darkened recesses for the remainder of the session.

Though shocked you may be at West's dreadful error, you must admit that expert players miss all the fun.

In the play, after the ace of clubs opening and a shift to a heart, declarer entered dummy by discarding one diamond on a heart honor and playing the diamond ace and trumping the deuce. The club king was led to discard a diamond loser, but East ruffed, and declarer was forced to overruff. Dummy was entered a second time by trumping a diamond, and a spade played. East followed. South put on the jack and West threw a heart. A little spade was played and West put on another heart. Later the spade ace and queen came to light in the West hand along with the king of diamonds, but these tricks were transferred to declarer's stack and the small slam scored as made.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

THE Civil Service Commission, "buried under work," cannot say at the moment, when the winners will be announced in the principal informational representative job that will pay $5,600. About 750 persons competed for the position—which the wags have said seems to be more cut out for a $25,000 man than someone of $5,600 caliber. But that's an old Federal custom—to make the requirements five times higher than the salary they're willing to pay.

SOMEONE in a big agency calls to question this columns remarks about the secret personnel folders. Employes and some of their organization leaders have long contended that the folders, containing all manner of charges against employes, are instruments through which trial is brought without the individual being given an opportunity to make defense. Our caller defended the secret folders on the ground that the personnel generally aren't interested in what the folders contain and that if the folders were opened to them, the Federal service would be turned into a battleground. He has been in the service more than two decades—said the caller—and in all that time has heard only one request from an employe to see a folder. The whole thing sounds to him like a talking point.

THE REA and the NRC have borrowed three TVA staff members and will reimburse the Authority for the loan. Those borrowed are Roland A. Wank, principal architect, G. Donald Hudson, chief, land planning division, and Edward N. Torbert, associate geographer. Wank, for five days a month, will, assist the REA in surveys of generating plants and establishing standards of lighting; Hudson and Torbert will work with the NRC on land classification methods and land settlement studies.

THE technical consultant for the Civil Service Commission, who will have wide latitude for independent judgment and the authority to cooperate directly with the technical training officials in charge of specialized governmental training programs, will be a long time coming. This because funds must be appropriated and the consultant chosen through the usual civil service process.

THE "woman with the most perfect radio voice," Mrs. Gladys M. Petch, will talk on "Sunlit Norway," at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening in the Departmental Auditorium on Constitution avenue. This address by the English lecturer and broadcaster is timed in advance of the arrival here, late in April, of the Crown Prince and Princess of Norway. Incidentally, Mrs. Petch was the first woman to teach English by radio in Europe and the first English radio broadcaster in Italy, Czecho-Slovakia, Austria and Germany. The lecture will be illustrated and is free and under National Park Service sponsorship.

THE National Park Service, incidentally, has acquired for its museum in Fredericksburg the famous Johnson Civil War Arms Collection, consisting of 185 pieces, which includes muskets, revolvers, gun-parts, swords and a variety of once-deadly weapons. The relics were bought by the city of Fredericksburg and placed for safekeeping in the museum the NPS maintains on the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park. The price paid for the collection was $900—a good buy.

THE Social ecurity Board is not taking on an "additional" group of between 100 and 200 assistant personnel clerks (CAF-3) for "vacancies" in the various field offices. Actually, there are no vacancies; what is wanted is a group to fill in gaps caused by normal shiftings about. It has adopted a very wise policy there, one of promoting from within and relaxing on the academic requirements as were placed under the civil service tests for these jobs. In other words, if an employe already in the board's service, has had what seems to be enough practical experience, this will be taken into consideration.

THE Railroad Retirement Board, which is extending itself strongly into the field, is increasingly turning its eyes on Social Security Board talent. This is quite legitimate and interesting, also, to SSB employes.

Bob Burns Says—

When you can't remember who you are—they call that amnesia. That's what happened to a policeman of Chelsea, Mass., after he fell an' hit his head. Three days later he was in a Chelsea drug store with 15 cents in his pocket, an' the next thing he knew, he came to in Miami, Fla., with a lot of new luggage an' $58!

Now, how do you figger that one? It kind of looks like people are more successful in life when they don't know who they are! Will somebody please hit me on the head? Maybe I could come to mayor of Hollywood or president of a bank! An' if a rap on the bean wouldn't do that much for me, I could always settle for less—like third or fourth vice president, or Hollywood dog-catcher! Don't laugh! Both of them jobs have plenty of class out here!

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Farmer Brown's Boy Takes a Look

Perchance may serve another's need.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's boy had been on a long tramp through the Green Forest and even up on the Great Mountain. He had been looking for nests. He knew that Redtail the Hawk and Mrs. Redtail had returned from their winter home. He knew that the nest which they had used for several seasons was gone. The tree in which it had been had been blown over in the hurricane in the fall. He wanted to find out if they were building a new nest and where. Also he was anxious to find out if any others of the Hawk family were building or were repairing old nests.

He was very much concerned for he knew that a sad thing was happening over much of the country. Each year there were fewer Hawks. He knew the reason, too. It was because a lot of hunters and farmers, really believing that they were doing a good deed, were shooting every Hawk they could and all because they were ignorant of the true facts and wouldn't believe those who did know, or wouldn't take the trouble to find out for themselves.

"It's a shame!" Farmer Brown's boy hotly declared to his father. "It's just as if a city should decide that it didn't need policemen any more and disbanded the force. What a time the crooks would have then! The Hawks are part of Mother Nature's police force. We never have had so many Rats and Mice on the farm as we have now, and there never has been a time when Hawks have been so scared. If one gets the chicken stealing habit that one will have to be shot, just the same as a crook has to be jailed, but killing those Hawks that haven't the chicken habit is wicked. It is like jailing all the crook's relatives because of the wrong he has done."

So Farmer Brown's boy had been searching to find out what the prospects were for having a few feathered police in the neighborhood during the coming summer. It was the edge of dusk when he reached the Green Meadows on his way home. As is his way before stepping out into the open, he paused for a look over the Green Meadows. At once his attention was drawn to the queer actions of what in the gathering dusk looked like two rather small Dogs, but which as soon as he had a good look at their tails he knew to be Foxes. He was delighted.

"So Reddy and Mrs. Reddy are back!" he exclaimed under his breath. "They were gone nearly all winter and I was afraid they might not return. What under the sun are they doing? They seem to be playing with something, batting it around. They act like a couple of puppies playing with a bone."

From where he was it did look much like that. First one then the other would pounce on something. They would hit at it with their paws. They pushed and knocked it about on the grass. They would back off a little and look at it, then spring on it. They would lie down beside it.

"It must be some kind of a new game," thought Farmer Brown's boy. "I wonder what that thing is they have there."

He watched for some time, but as it was getting too dark for him to see clearly he finally started toward Reddy and Mrs. Reddy. So intent were they on what they were doing that at first they didn't notice him and he was quite near before Reddy chanced to look directly at him. Like two shadows Reddy and Mrs. Reddy slipped away toward the Old Pasture. Farmer Brown's boy continued on his way. He was curious to see what they had seemingly been playing with.

"Of all things!" he exclaimed when he saw that it was an old dirty pickle bottle. He stooped to pick it up. Just as he put a hand on it something small and dark shot out of it and disappeared in the grass Danny Meadow Mouse had seen his chance to escape and had made the most of it.
